World Advertisers Emphasize Their Part in Bettering Living Conditions

PROUD OF PIONEERING IN UNTRIED TERRITORY

Railroad Men and Bankers of 75 Years Ago Called Leaders in Expansion Era

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 22 (Special)—Advertising in all its many phases was considered in more than a score of departmental sessions in connection with the annual convention of Associated Advertising Clubs of the World here.

Special emphasis was laid by the various speakers on the part advertising is playing in protecting the public from fraud and in expanding smaller communities. Emphasis was laid in several sessions on community advertising, and the part it has played in opening new fields where better living conditions were made possible by the introduction of better working conditions.

"From the very start American railroads, their managers and promoters, were forced into community advertising," said C. B. Subborough, general traffic manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad, "and to the old railroad men and bankers of 75 years ago and more we must award the palm as original community advertisers on behalf of transportation interests. Their methods would doubtless seem strange now, but we cannot question their effectiveness.

Railroads Find the Way

"In the great majority of cases community advertising by a railroad must be of an impartial and general nature, and is hedged about by restraints and restrictions not encountered in approaching the problems of purely commercial advertising.

"Nevertheless, in spite of these restrictions, the American railroads are finding ways and means to carry on a very extensive volume of community and territorial advertising.

"The railroads in general have been leaders in driving home the slogan, 'See America first.'

"A railroad is and ought to be the best friend and most consistent helper of every community which it serves, and no one realizes this truth more thoroughly than railroad managers themselves."

That the enormous volume of trade in the United States is proof of the stimulating force of advertising which has increased consumption and raised the standard of living was the contention of Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times.

"One of the excellent results of advertising by companies having extensive public relations," said Mr. Wiley, "is the effect upon the employees themselves. The public utilities may learn something in this direction from the great department stores.

"In such stores the employees are required to know what the company has advertised in the daily papers, both merchandise and institutional copy. The managers find that the employees take the keenest interest in the public advertising of the store's policy and goods.

Employees Like Advertising

"There is something stimulating in knowing that the news of the firm has been spread abroad. The influence which such advertising has upon employees is quite different from that made by a mere printed house organ or inspirational statements circulated only among the workers. Public utility advertising in newspapers should be carefully calculated to have the right effect upon the employees, as well as upon the public."

Approaching the subject of following up, "any well-conceived advertising program in the daily papers," with direct mail advertising, "if such costly space is to be fully productive," S. E. Conybeare of Lancaster, Pa., of the Armstrong Cork Company, likened advertising and selling to the "push and pull twins of modern business."

"We feel," he said, "that the national advertiser should intelligently study his merchandising problem and make a proper division between the money he will spend for space in publications and the money he will spend for follow-up to his retail outlet through direct mail advertising, to make his magazine and newspaper space pay adequate returns. In nearly every kind of business the two forms of advertising should go hand in hand if both are to be really successful."

EDUCATION MINISTER IN AUSTRIA CHANGED

By Special Cable

VIENNA, June 22.—Dr. Anton Rintelen, Governor of the Province of Syria, has accepted the portfolio of education in succession to Emile Schneider, who vacated owing to differences of opinion with the Chancellor, Dr. Rudolf Ramek, on educational issues. Dr. Rintelen's appointment temporarily eases the crisis which was threatening to bring down the Ramek Cabinet.

There remain, however, The Christian Science Monitor representative is informed, disagreements within the Christian Socialist or Government party which the incident has revealed, and it is being suggested in well-informed political circles that Dr. Rintelen has taken the first step toward the Chancellorship. Nevertheless, while the ex-Chancellor, Dr. Siegel, who is regarded as the real power in the country, is in America, no radical changes are expected.

'Gentiobiose' Is Latest Saccharine Neophyte

By the Associated Press

Washington, June 22

BY a chemical process known as acetylation, the bureau of standards has discovered a very rare sugar known as "gentiobiose" which, although it is considered of no great commercial significance at this time, is expected to prove valuable to industrial chemists in working out problems in the manufacture of corn sugar.

The new form of sugar is an extract of the undesirable by-product waste known as hydrol which results from the manufacture of crystalline corn sugar or dextrose.

SURPLUS TAXES TO REDUCE DEBT, COOLIDGE PLAN

President Withholds Promise of More Cuts Until New Law Is Tested

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP)—Although the Treasury surplus exceeds hopes of estimators, President Coolidge has withheld promise of further tax reduction efforts until the new revenue law is submitted to the test of operation during the coming year.

The President informed his Cabinet officers and bureau chiefs at the semi-annual budget meeting that this fiscal year, ending June 30, probably would be closed with a surplus of $390,000,000.

Indications also pointed to margins of $185,000,000 next fiscal year and $20,000,000 at the end of the succeeding 12 months, he said, but he withheld promise of tax reduction pending thorough study of the working of the new law.

The $390,000,000 surplus, calculated on the basis of latest returns from second installment income tax payments, is almost four times the amount forecast six months ago. Income tax returns for this quarter are expected to reach $440,000,000, almost $70,000,000 more than was collected for the corresponding period last year despite the higher tax rates which prevailed then.

March receipts of $505,000,000 also were much higher than a year ago, in the face of reduction in taxes just authorized by Congress. These increased returns and large collections of back taxes, amounting to $350,000,000, are held by Mr. Coolidge and the Treasury to account in large part for the unusual surplus.

Surplus to Cut Debt

The surplus will be applied to the public debt, bringing the total reduction for this fiscal year to about $886,000,000. This will leave the debt at $19,630,000,000.

Proposing to cut expenditures next year in order to assure a surplus, Mr. Coolidge informed the department chiefs that some reduction in personnel must be made to offset the increased expenditures brought about by the public improvement program, which he considered in line with a policy of "constructive economy."

The President again reproached the state and local governments for their increased expenses, warning it was fraught with grave consequences. In 1921, he said, the cost of all government in this country was $9,500,000,000, of which federal expenditure constituted almost 60 per cent. In 1925 the cost of all government had increased to $11,500,000,000, of which only 27 per cent was represented by federal expenditure.

While expenditures of the Federal Government probably will reach $3,600,000,000 for the next fiscal year, Mr. Coolidge expressed a hope the following year could be concluded at a cost of $3,200,000,000, exclusive of the postal service and tax refunds.

Personnel Cut Ordered

A reduction of at least 2 per cent in the number of federal employees next year was demanded by Herbert M. Lord, director of the Bureau of the Budget, in his address at the meeting.

Such a cut in the federal personnel would mean a saving of $20,000,000 next year, Mr. Lord said. The task can be accomplished, the budget chief explained, without the discharge of an employee, but by the expedient of not filling vacancies. The number of vacancies in the civil service total about 9 per cent of the entire personnel each year.

SENATORS HEAR OF W. C. T. U. PART IN PRIMARY RACE

Special from Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 22—Differences between officers of the Pennsylvania Woman's Christian Temperance Union were brought out before the Senate campaign fund investigating committee. The matter was brought before the investigators because of charges made by Mrs. Maude Seymour, vice-president, that the organization had been used by Governor Pinchot in his campaign for the senatorial nomination. She also claimed that she had been unable to obtain an accounting of a $250,000 fund that the organization had raised to enforce the state dry law.

Mrs. Ella George, president, denied that no accounting had been made of the fund and explained the participation of the organization in the Pinchot campaign. Mrs. Leah Cobb Marion, custodian of the fund, also testified briefly.

"How much does your organization collect from dues a year?" James A. Reed (D.), Senator from Missouri, began the examination of Mrs. George.

"We have about 50,000 members and our dues are $1 a year," Mrs. George answered.

Opposes Wet Candidates

"Does your organization oppose candidates who are against prohibition?"

"Yes."

"Do your lecturers speak against such men?"

"Yes."

"Do you pay them salaries?"

"Some, very little."

"Do you send out literature?"

"Yes."

"Whom did your organization support in the last Pennsylvania primary?"

"Governor Pinchot and Mr. Fisher."

"How many of your people did Pinchot have out during the campaign?"

"Three or four. He paid them."

"How many letters did you send out for Pinchot?"

"We sent out two circular letters to all the county officers, about 30,000 in all."

"Who paid for them?"

"Governor Pinchot."

"He paid for printing and mailing?"

"He paid all charges."

"How much did all this cost?"

Collections Total $130,904

"How much did your organization collect for the Pinchot fund?" Mr. Reed inquired.

"$130,904, according to our last report, April, 1926."

"Did you pay collectors to gather money?"

"Oh, no, it came in voluntarily."

"The Legislature failed to appropriate $250,000 to increase the personnel of the prohibition work or to enforce the bill which they passed. You ladies consulted with the Governor and then undertook to raise the money by popular subscription, and when it was raised it was turned over to a board of trustees who were appointed after a consultation with the Governor. Then there was a force created to gather information to carry out the prosecutions of the law and that force was appointed by the Governor with your approval. And so, having created the force in this way, they proceeded with their work and this financial report you gave us shows the sums and items expended," Mr. Reed summarized.

"That is right."

"And you expended in this work $91,611. Where is the balance of approximately $40,000?"

"In the treasury of the organization."

Forty-Seventh Class Hears Dr. Tinker of Yale—Miss Pendleton Announces Honors

WELLESLEY, Mass., June 22 (Special)—Wellesley's forty-fourth senior class left the portals of its Alma Mater today. For the first time in the college history the commencement ceremonies were held in the auditorium of the Student Alumnæ building, where 340 candidates were invested with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, 13 candidates the degree of Master of Arts, two candidates the degree of Master of Science and 20 the certificate of the department of hygiene and physical education.

Immediately preceding the exercises, the assemblage of faculty, students and alumnæ formed in academic procession on Norumbega Hill, from which the lines advanced with impressive solemnity to Alumnæ Hall, the multi-colored hoods, distinguishing the various advanced degrees, contrasting brilliantly with the sober silhouette of the black caps and gowns.

Frances L. Knapp, chief marshal, led the way, followed by Miss Ellen Fitz Pendleton, president of the college; Prof. Chauncey Brewster Tinker of the English department of Yale, commencement orator; Bishop Slattery and William E. Huntington of the board of trustees, members of the faculty and the student body.

Following the overture of "Rosamunde," played as the procession marched into the auditorium, Bishop Slattery gave the invocation in the name of the class. Miss Pendleton next read from the original Melancthon Bible, owned by the college treasure room, and responsive reading of Latin Psalms followed, with the "Gloria Patri."

"The New Creature"

The commencement oration, "The New Creature," by Dr. Tinker, who holds the Emily Sanford chair of English literature at Yale, was a vigorous appeal for the well-rounded, co-ordinated education which sees things as a unit, not alone in segregated parts. He emphasized the view that the proper approach to problems is a vital factor in their solution.

"Nothing really matters except the attitude of mind which you take with you into the next stage of your existence," he said. "The precious possession which you have acquired here is a mind become receptive to ideas, sensitive to their value, and willing to test their power by going out into a distracting world and living by them.

"Ideals, principles, standards, call them what you will—I refer to that will within us which drives us to the hard and unpopular act when the tendency is to drift with the current or to permit others to take over the direction of our lives. The degree to which you have developed that will is the measure of your attainment here.

"You have during the four years become a new creature. Among the changes wrought by time, you may reckon a quickened sensibility, more sources of worthy pleasure, and a willingness to consider the importance of certain problems which you were once content to leave in their native obscurity. It is in respect of this accessibility of ideas that you will find yourself differentiated from the world in which you move.

"It is not the facts communicated to you that you value, but the discovery of the meaning of a whole world of things. You may have attained your discovery by looking backward to the Hellenic way of life, or looking downward through a microscope. The act detached you from the crowd and released you from the tyranny of indifference and contempt.

Lauds Liberal Education

"One or two such local experiences are in themselves enough to justify a college education. In this education neither science availeth anything, nor the humanities, but a new creature.

"You are aware that a liberal education is one in which the student has been released from the tyranny of merely practical issues. She is not obliged to justify her studies by showing their practical utility. She is free in that her environment countenances the expenditure of time and energy to investigate a subject, no matter whither it may lead the inquirer.

"If man is told that a certain record cannot be surpassed, that some subject is beyond human comprehension, an unquenchable desire is stimulated in him to break down the barriers. Man by nature desires to know.

"In this indomitable impulse we find the definitive mark of human kind; and in the stimulus of this same instinct we may find the peculiar function of a seat of learning, and in particular of a liberal college.

"Evidently the best thing such a mother can do for her children is to awaken within them this imperishable desire to disperse the clouds of ignorance and to penetrate into the significance of the hitherto unseen and unknown, clinging in perpetual hope to that assurance from a brighter sphere than ours, 'And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.'"

The degrees of bachelor of arts were then presented by President Pendleton, those of master of arts by Miss Alice Waite, dean of the college, and Miss Helen Sard Hughes, head of graduate study, followed by conferring of the degrees of master of science and certificates.

Honor Awards Announced

Announcement was then made by Miss Pendleton of honorary awards.

The John Masefield prize for excellence in prose writing went to Miss Winifred Warren of Honolulu, while that for excellence in verse writing went to Miss Katherine Perrin Gage of Suffield, Conn. The prizes, which take the form of autographed copies of Mr. Masefield's works, were established in 1915, after the poet's en-

AIR MAIL TEST TO BOSTON DUE

Trial Trip of New York Airplane Service Scheduled for Today

This afternoon the first airplane of the Boston-Hartford-New York air mail carrying company, the Colonial Air Transport, Inc., was scheduled to land at the Boston Airport from New York today, with Juan T. Trippe, general manager of the company, aboard.

The service itself will begin on July 1, under authorization of the federal postal officials, and the first round trip between New York and Boston is expected to be completed on that date.

There are only 10 pounds of souvenir and philatelic mail now waiting for the first trip at the Boston general post office, and W. Irving Bullard, president of the air line, announces that the company expects to carry 1000 pounds on the first day. Users of the air mail may obtain full information as to rates and schedules by calling the Boston Chamber of Commerce or the central post office. Mr. Bullard urges commercial firms to prepare to begin use of the air mail immediately.

The air mail now has three new airplanes actually delivered to it for the line. Several big, three-motored airplanes which will eventually be put into service will not be used until fall, and officials announce today that information regarding them may be expected in the near future.

OPEN TIDE SURVEY OF BOSTON HARBOR

Special from Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 22—A party of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey of the Department of Commerce has commenced a tide and current survey of Boston Harbor, with a view of providing information to mariners and to ascertain the direction of tidal flow throughout the harbor, it was announced by Commander G. T. Rude, chief of the Tides and Currents Division of the Survey.

The observations of the survey party, which comprises three boats, it was explained, will be finished in about a month. The surveyors will record the velocities and directions of the currents throughout the harbor, which will enable the survey at any future time to forecast what currents will prevail in the harbor.

COTTON CENSUS APPROVED

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP)—A bill by Carl Vinson (D.), Representative from Georgia, to provide for an actual census of a portion of the cotton crop has been passed by the House and sent to the Senate.

ENDICOTT PRIZES ANNOUNCED AT CONSERVATORY

Composition Awards Made—H. M. Dunham Honored for 50 Years' Teaching

A concert by prominent members of the graduating class was the feature of the commencement exercises of the New England Conservatory of Music today in Jordan Hall. Following an address by Charles G. Bancroft, a vice-president of the board of trustees, the diplomas were presented by George W. Chadwick, director.

The Endicott awards for composition in the contest for 1925-26 were announced as follows: $200 to Seigi Abe, Japan, work for orchestra; $150 to Herbert Boardman, West Somerville, Mass., work for chorus with accompaniment; $100 to Edward Jenkins, Jamaica Plain, Mass., movement for string quartet; $100 to Leon Vartanian, Tiflis, South Russia, group of pianoforte pieces; special prize of $50 to Vladimir Rassouchine, Irkoutsk, Siberia, for group of songs.

Miss Ruth Aline Culbertson and Morris Louis Feldman were graduated with the highest honors in supplementary subjects. Miss Culbertson is also the winner of the Mason and Hamlin prize.

Fifty Years' Service

A notable event of the concert program was the performance of "Aurora," a tone poem for orchestra and organ, by Henry M. Dunham, veteran Boston organist and composer, who has completed 50 years' service as a member of the Conservatory faculty.

He was graduated with the class of 1873 and began his teaching at the school three years later. The "Aurora" was first heard under Conservatory auspices at Symphony Hall several years ago. It has since then been performed at New York, Los Angeles and many other music centers.

Another piece of great local interest on the program was "Dawn," by Seigi Abe, a young Japanese of the senior class, who won an Endicott prize for this work a year ago.

Mr. Abe, who studied English with missionaries of the Dutch Reformed Church in the Hokkaido, Japan, came to this country to obtain a musical education, which he has earned by tuning pianos and performing other services in Boston families. The choice of his work for a place on the commencement program was a popular one.

Commencement Concert

The concert program follows:

Bach, Prelude in C major for the Organ, Edward Walker Jenkins, Jamaica Plain; Mozart, first movement of the Concerto in D minor for pianoforte and orchestra, Miss Rossanna McGinness, Evansville, Ind.; Chopin, first movement of the Concerto in F minor for pianoforte and orchestra, Miss Ruth Culbertson, Mancelona, Mich.; Paderewski, Concerto in A minor, first movement, Miss Della Louise Furman, Franklin, Pa.; Mozart, aria from La Clemenza di Tito: "Deh, per questo istante," Miss Mary Gertrude McClure, New Bloomfield, Pa.; Goldmark, aria from the Concerto in A minor for violin and orchestra, Morris Louis Feldman, Manchester, N. H.; Seigi Abe, "Akebone" (Dawn), winner of the prize for the best orchestral work in the Endicott competition, 1925; Wagner, Quintet from "Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg," Miss Constance King, Bradford, Pa.; Miss Florence Owen, Newton; William Daniel Simmons, Kansas City, Mo.; George Warren Garland, Stoneham; Charles Whitaker Pearson, Newton; Henry M. Dunham, "Aurora," tone poem for orchestra, after the fresco by Guido Reni, Albert Ernest Gingras, Lynn.

Renominated in Maine

GOV. RALPH O. BREWSTER

GOV. BREWSTER IS WINNER IN MAINE PRIMARY

Present Executive and Four Representatives Are Renominated

PORTLAND, Me., June 22 (AP)—Gov. Ralph O. Brewster has been renominated by Maine Republicans. Leading his opponent, Maj. Arthur L. Thayer of Bangor, from the first returns of yesterday's primary, he increased his margin as the late figures from the cities came in until this morning it had reached 14,430 from 506 precincts out of 633 in the State.

These precincts, in 401 of the 519 cities and towns in the State, gave: Brewster, 43,251; Thayer, 28,821.

They included all the cities except Rockland and two precincts of Portland. The missing precincts were chiefly in small towns and plantations, and their total vote could not affect the result.

Representative Ira G. Hersey, Republican, was renominated for Representative in Congress for a sixth term in the Fourth District by a wide margin over Benjamin W. Blanchard of Bangor. Representatives Carroll L. Deedy, Wallace H. White Jr. and John E. Nelson, all Republicans, were renominated without opposition.

There were no Democratic contests for Governor or Representative in Congress. The party nominees are: For Governor, Ernest L. McLean, Mayor of Augusta; for Representative in Congress, Richard E. Herson of Lebanon, Charles M. Starbird of Auburn, Edward Chase of Baring and Frank A. Peabody of Houlton.

Elbert D. Hayford, State Auditor, Republican, won a renomination over Edwin J. Morrell of South Portland, apparently receiving a somewhat larger majority than that of Governor Brewster over Mayor Thayer. Returns from 488 precincts in 396 towns, including one precinct in Bangor and all but three precincts in Portland, gave Hayford 32,916 and Morrill 17,777.

Major Thayer made the chief issue of his campaign against Governor Brewster a constitutional amendment prohibiting the appropriation of public funds for private schools and other institutions, passed by the last Legislature and to come before the voters at the state election in September. Governor Brewster won his nomination and election two years ago on a platform favoring such an amendment.

Major Thayer also won some support from members of the party who were dissatisfied over the ousting by the Governor of Sheriff Henry F. Cummings of Kennebec County on charges of maladministration of the county jail. Sheriff Cummings, on incomplete returns, appeared to have been renominated over Ira A. Witham of Clinton.

Major Thayer carried Kennebec County by a vote of 6209 to 5187 for Brewster. Governor Brewster carried most, if not all, of the other counties. The Governor carried his home city, Portland, as well as Bangor, the home city of his opponent. Major Thayer carried the cities of Waterville, Augusta and Eastport.

The little hamlets of Deblois and Allagash Plantation did not cast a single ballot. Allagash, in Aroostook County, reported that all the men were busy driving logs on the St. John River and that the women apparently were afraid to vote.

Governor Brewster captured all five of the Republican votes on Monhegan Island, famous as the place where Donald B. Macmillan makes it a practice to stop on his way from Maine to the Arctic on his polar expeditions.

ACTION AWAITED IN COTTON PLANT STRIKE

ADAMS, Mass., June 22 (AP)—Watchful waiting was the policy that appeared to have been adopted today by both the employees and the officials of the Berkshire Cotton Manufacturing Company, where nearly 2000 workers went on strike yesterday in protest against the discharge of 40 speeder tenders last week. They had gone on strike in protest against being required to operate three frames instead of two. The mill is closed and as no attempt is being made to run it, the strikers are not doing any picketing.

BRITAIN URGED TO RAISE WAGES AND CUT COSTS

This Method Would Revive Trade, Argues Co-Author of Famous Book

EFFICIENCY OPENS ROAD TO MARKETS

United States System of Promotion by Ability Praised—English Plan Deprecated

By Cable from Monitor Bureau

LONDON, June 22—Bertram Austin, a young English engineer, one of the collaborators in the now famous book, "Secret of High Wages," which was written after an inquiry into American factory methods, and which has created a stir in British industrial circles, spoke on "Can Britain Adopt American Methods?" today at the monthly luncheon of the American Chamber of Commerce in London. Leaders of trade and industry in the two English-speaking countries were in attendance.

Mr. Austin, after declaring that British industry presented a problem "almost as grave as that with which we were faced in August, 1914," referred to the extent of the depression and the unfortunate quarrels into which employers and employed have fallen, and observed that "employers will have to show a deeper sense of obligation and a greater desire for the well being of the workers if England is to start once again on the road to success and better times."

Pay Labor Well

He referred to the evolution in business, changes in channels of trade and prosperity, and decline in certain industries. Just as developments in the demand for safety razors were pushing the old razor trade aside, he said, so it was with other lines, and, despite tariffs and embargoes, it would be impossible for manufacturers to keep on making undesirable goods.

The speaker praised the United States method of promotion by merit and ability, deprecating the English system of advancement because of seniority, family connections, or personal friendships. The speaker criticized the "large number of delightfully useless persons occupying the most responsible positions in England for which they cannot even profess to have the slightest qualification."

He continued: "You are misusing labor if you can't pay it well, and if you can't pay it well then you ought not to use it at all and leave the job to someone else who can. The higher the efficiency of the industry the higher the wages it can afford to pay and should pay. Efficiency and high wages go together, the one is not possible without the other. We have seen some of the less efficient plants in the United States and on going into wage rates I found them lower than those prevailing in well-managed, prosperous works.

An Exchange of Ideas

"Can we adopt the method of payment by results? Well, we adopted it first, more than 100 years ago. Was it not Robert Owen who, about 1800, discovered that well-paid, efficient labor was the cheapest in the end? My answer is—we can adopt this method. The method in use on the other side of an exchange of ideas between competing firms in the same idustry is nothing but the plainest common sense. All motor-car firms in the United States are competing hard, yet they all get together to discuss ways and means for improving their own industry; they exchange their ideas and views one with another and we all know with what success. Between them they produce over 4,000,000 motor-cars a year.

"Do our industrialists get together in the same industry and exchange freely their ideas? Well, they get together but not for a free exchange of ideas. They usually get together to form a ring to keep up prices to the detriment both of their industry and the public, who are called upon to subsidize their inefficient workings in the form of higher prices.

"Is the American method open to us? Can we adopt it? Not yet, perhaps, but it will come by economic pressure. The coal owners would benefit greatly by a few new ideas—more especially in regard to wages and hours. We, in this country, think too much in terms of money and not enough in terms of production and consumption. Material prosperity is represented by an exchange of goods and services, the more goods and services we exchange the higher our standard of living. If 20,000,000 suits are made a year we can all have one suit a year; if 40,000,000 suits are made with the same human energy as before we can all have two suits a year. We must get the utmost goods produced for the energy we expend and that means economy in energy, economy in production and distribution.

"We are suffering from a decline in manufactured exports—why, because other countries are taking our markets by more cheaply produced goods. We can only get our markets back by reducing costs and prices. We can do both by going for large production to satisfy our home market. As production gets cheaper then you are able to export by reason of lower costs and lower prices.

Discard "Antiquated Methods"

"In some of our products we are even losing our own home market—welded steel tubes were imported last year to the value of more than £1,000,000. Nuts and bolts are coming in increased quantities. Gloves and electric lamp bulbs, machinery, wearing apparel are increasing in imports every year. If each of our 12,000,000 brothers could earn and be paid another 5s a week we should increase our home trade or turnover by £150,000,000 a year.

"I am convinced that the only solution to our depression in trade is for the three great bodies in industry—the workers, the trade unions, and employers—to co-operate in a new industrial policy. We must discard our antiquated methods and machinery and open our eyes to what is going on around us. If we would overcome our ingrained prejudice of things American and look upon their methods as the plainest common sense, we should begin to see the advantages of relying upon this particular quality rather than upon a mass of tradition and ritual which retards our progress."

LABOR DEBATES MIGRATION ISSUE

Delegates From Many Countries Discuss Problems Vital to Workers

By Cable from Monitor Bureau

LONDON, June 22—A three-day conference to consider migration problems, convened jointly by the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions and the Socialist and Labor International, opened in London today. The delegates represented 17 European and six overseas countries, including Australia, New Zealand, Canada, India and Palestine. The absence of United States representatives was noted with regret. Mr. Mertens, Belgium, delivered the opening address and summed up the main problems the conference had to consider. Since the war the difficulties confronting the workers had compelled them to emigrate in larger numbers and generally speaking the problem had grown much more acute.

Countries which formerly welcomed immigrants, especially the United States, now impose restrictions which were supported by the national workers in those countries. The point of view of the international workers on these restrictions had to be decided. On the other hand certain countries, notably France, had lost so many workers that it was obliged to encourage a large scale of immigration, and this created serious problems for those nationals whose working conditions and standards of living might be imperiled.

Again in countries like Austria, which had lost much territory after the war, ten of thousands of workers now found no means of livelihood in their own land and must seek work elsewhere or suffer the greatest misery.

The danger to labor conditions arose from the fact that immigrants were often weakly organized and therefore subject to low wages and long hours which might endanger the standards won by the trade union movement.

All these and other serious problems demanded increasing study by the labor movement, and Mr. Mertens therefore appealed to delegates representing both European and overseas points of view to examine the subject in a spirit of collaboration, with a desire to find solutions of the difficult problems. The most important practical proposal before the conference was one to establish an international migration office to regulate measures for the protection of immigrants and to co-operate with national migration offices.

COUNCILMANIC RULE IN CITIES LOSING GROUND

Canvass Shows Commission Form Increasingly Popular in Michigan

PONTIAC, June 19 (Special Correspondence)—Aldermen are becoming scarce in Michigan cities that have reached the 10,000 population mark, judging by the progress being made by the commission form of government.

Questionnaires sent to clerks of 40 cities having approximately 10,000 population brought responses from 33, of which only eight reported an aldermanic government. The reports gave 21 cities having the commission government, two councilmanic, one semi-commission and one operating under a special charter.

They were practically unanimous in expressing satisfaction with their form of government, with no changes in prospect, excepting Ypsilanti, which contemplates a charter amendment creating a city assessor, increasing the supervisors from two to four, and changing the manner of collecting taxes.

Twelve of the cities have city managers whose salaries range from $8500, paid by Jackson, down to $2000, the amount received by the city manager of Manistee. Flint, with 10 aldermen, pays each $500 a year. Lansing, which has 16, pays them each $400 annually. There are 12 in Holland, who receive but $50 a year, while Ionia's 14 each get $40 a year. Menominee pays each of her 14 aldermen $15 annually and Ypsilanti's 10 are dollar-a-year men. No remuneration is received by the 20 aldermen serving Ishpeming, or the 14 who conduct the city government at Ann Arbor.

Hamtramck has commission government, calling its governing body a council, and paying the councilmen $3500 a year. It has no city manager.

Ludington is working under a special charter, with a mayor and eight commissioners. The Mayor and three commissioners-at-large are elected by the electors of the city as a whole and one commissioner is elected from each of the five wards. The Mayor is named for two years, and one commissioner-at-large is elected each year for three years. The ward commissioners are elected for two years each and all commissioners are paid $50 a year. The Mayor's salary is $300.

Wyandotte has six councilmen who receive $500 a year, the Mayor receiving $1000. Albion has four councilmen, who receive $50 annually, the Mayor is paid $100 and the city manager $2500.

River Rouge is semi-commission. There are six commissioners, who draw $250 a year and a Mayor, whose annual salary is $300.

Mount Clemens has four commissioners, who direct public safety, finance, streets and parks, and sewers and water works, each receiving $150 a year, while the Mayor is paid $200. Saginaw pays its five commissioners $3000 each annually, while the Mayor and commissioner of public safety receive $3500 each.

The Mayor and commissioners of Marquette are paid $3 for each meeting they attend. Ironwood commissioners are paid $5 for each meeting. Nominal salaries are paid the mayors and commissioners of other cities.

MAYOR VISITS PORTLAND

Mayor Nichols, who, with his son, Clark, and George H. Johnson, director of celebrations and publicity, is in Portland, Me., today, is expected to return to Boston tomorrow evening. Mr. Nichols has arranged to be in Boston and Cambridge Thursday in order to take part in the commencement exercises at Harvard, both officially and as a graduate.

MASONS TO HEAR ADDRESS

Warren L. Bishop, second assistant district attorney of Middlesex County, will address the members and guests of Loyalty Lodge, A. F. & A. M., on June 28, at the Masonic Apartments, Jamaica Plain, following the business meeting. His talk will deal with the work in which he is engaged. Bert E. Holland is master of Loyalty Lodge.

BRITISH WOMEN IN CONFERENCE

Problems of Emigration and Kindred Issues Discussed at London Meeting

By Cable from Monitor Bureau

LONDON, June 22—The British Women's Commonwealth League opened its second annual conference today at the Royal Society of Arts, under the presidenecy of Mrs. Corbett Ashby. The subjects for discussion included "Citzien Rights of Women in Relation to Overseas Settlement" and "Problems of Government." The speakers at the first session stressed the problems of emigration with special reference to educated women. Hitherto the question of emigration for women has been more or less limited to women going abroad in a domestic capacity, but since overseas openings are beginning to occur in other and wider directions, today's conference for the first time on record dealt with the larger aspect of the subject.

Following Mrs. Ashby's opening address, "The Position of Women in Planning and Administration" was discussed by Miss Gladys Pott, England; Miss Whitham, South Australia; Mrs. Bellas, South Africa; Miss Maxwell, Canada, and Miss Overell, Tasmania.

Countries' Opportunities Stressed

Lady Galway spoke on "England's Need," Miss Helen Fraiser on "The Educated Woman," and Miss Frances Taylor on "Opportunities in Victoria" at the afternoon session, when Miss Ada Bromham, Australia, presided.

J. Bruce Walker, director of the Canadian Department of Immigration and Colonization, and Lady Foster, Canada, spoke on "Opportunity for Women in Canada," being followed by Mrs. Gipson on "Opportunity in South Africa," Mrs. Giblin on "Opportunity in Tasmania," and Mrs. Glanville on "Opportunity in New South Wales."

The Duchess of Atholl said that the governments were concerned with the machinery of emigration, but women could supply the personal touch impossible for government officials to give, and which was so essential when it was a question of tearing up deep roots, severing of old ties, and moving into an unknown environment. She told of her recent visit to Canada and how much personal effort and hospitality were expended by women at St. John to help mother and child emigrants.

Viscountess Astor said the work of women members of Parliament was less important than the work women could do in the world. The evolution of women must proceed on spiritual lines if they would change the world, she said, and it was their primary work to teach the rising generation to value the spiritual more than the material.

Nationality Laws

Ellen Wilkinson, a member of Parliament, speaking on "Women and Industrial Conditions Throughout the Empire," said that the progress of women could only be measured by her world status. The Lancashire cotton operative was intimately bound up with her Indian sister. The women in backward countries, she said, must be borne in mind by the women living under more advanced conditions.

Pethick Lawrence, Member of Parliament, urged a change in the present British nationality laws. Last year he said a resolution was unanimously carried in the House of Commons to the effect that a married woman should retain her nationality, and the question was now awaiting the assent of the various overseas governments. He asked the women of those countries to work for the immediate adoption of the law.

COUNCIL APPROVES MORE WATER MAINS

Passes Mayor's Order for $500,000 for Extension

Boston City Council passed an order of the Mayor providing for a loan for $500,000 for extension of water mains and one for an appropriation of $50,000 for new elevators for City Hall. It also acted favorably upon an appropriation of $1500 for a legislative committee to study the advisability of removing the elevated structure in Charlestown.

Loans proposed by Mayor Nichols and amounting to $1,530,000 were referred to the finance committee. They were for $715,000 for a new pumping station in the Porter Street part of East Boston; $550,000 for Ashland Street widening, sewering, and paving, and $275,000 for beginning the work on the River Street improvement as authorized by the Legislature.

The Council postponed action on Mayor Nichols' order for $400,000 for the purchase of additional snow-removing apparatus for the city. The Mayor's committee on public emergencies made the recommendation but the Finance Commission opposed it on the ground that if the city's snow removal contracts with private concerns were better enforced, there would be no necessity for buying more equipment. The Council adjourned to July 12.

Reference to the committee on public lands was given the Mayor's order proposing the sale for $48,000 of the Public Works Department yard at Medford and Terminal Streets, Charlestown.

ARCTIC EXPEDITION LEAVES FOR BAR HARBOR

ROCKLAND, Me., June 22 (AP)—The sub-Arctic expedition schooners Bowdoin and Sachem left port early today for Bar Harbor, their next port of call before proceeding to Yarmouth, N. S. The weather was cloudy and the wind southwest.

Commander Donald B. MacMillan was notified on the eve of his departure of the entertainment awaiting him at Maine's summer metropolis, including a dinner to be given tonight by Guy H. Torrey, a member of the Governor's Council.

THREE SHIPS SAIL TOMORROW

Three passenger steamers will sail from Commonwealth Pier tomorrow for southern Europe, according to schedule, having left New York today. The passengers who will embark here include many Italians and Greeks, who plan to return to their native lands for the summer. The steamers are the Cozulich liner, Martha Washington, sailing for Ponta Delgada, Lisbon and Trieste; the Fabre liner, Patria, for Palermo and Naples, and the Greek liner, Byron, for Greek and Levant ports.

GOVERNOR WINS STATE PRIMARY IN MINNESOTA

Mr. Christianson, Renamed by Republicans, May Face Magnus Johnson

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 22 (Special)—Theodore Christianson, present Governor, is the choice of Minnesota Republicans among the candidates to be voted on in the November election. Governor Christianson easily defeated George Leach, Mayor of Minneapolis, who for the second time in two years went down in the primary election. Even in Hennepin County, in which Mr. Leach resides, the Governor made a runaway race of it. Mayor Leach's best showing was in St. Paul, although available returns made it appear that Governor Christianson would carry it.

It is likely that Mr. Christianson's chief opponent in the fall election will be Magnus Johnson, former United States Senator from Minnesota. The third man in the field will be the Democratic nominee, Alfred Jacques of Duluth, who had no opposition in today's primary.

Mr. Christianson made his bid for re-election on the showing of his administration in checking the rising tide of public expenditures. Mayor Leach opposed the Governor's economy policy as too drastic. Mr. Christianson is very strongly dry. Mayor Leach is wet.

In the Fourth Congressional District, St. Paul, Melvin J. Maas, wet, was nominated over Oscar E. Keller, incumbent, and Fred A. Snyder, the latter a bone-dry candidate. The vote which nominated Mr. Maas was the smallest in the history of the city. With 105,000 voters qualified, less than 30,000 took part in the nominating proceeding.

The anti-prohibition vote in Ramsey County is by no means indicative of Minnesota sentiment, inasmuch as this district is admittedly one of the wettest in the State. The victory of Mr. Maas was, therefore, no surprise, although the Anti-Saloon League came in at the last minute in behalf of Mr. Snyder. Outside of Ramsey County it is believed on the face of partial returns that dry candidates have held their own.

AWARDS ARE MADE IN PUPIL CONTEST

AUGUSTA, Me., June 22 (Special)—The committee named by Gov. Ralph O. Brewster in the American youth and teacher award contest for Maine announces the three winners. Annie Eugenia Bailey of Sanford was chosen as the teacher who has accomplished the greatest good for the pupils of the State. Hallie A. McKeen of Stoneham was selected as the girl and Clayton Francis White of Norway as the boy representing the best example of American ideals in youth.

The winners will be awarded, by the management of the Sesquicentennial International Expositions, a week's trip to Philadelphia with all expenses paid.

LIABILITY INSURANCE RATES FACE INQUIRY

Profits Question Raised by Compulsory Motor Law

Compulsory automobile liability insurance, which goes into effect in Massachusetts on Jan. 1, 1927, should cost about the same as existing automobile insurance, agents and brokers contended before Wesley E. Monk, state Commissioner of Insurance, at a conference called by him yesterday afternoon to secure information to be used in the fixing of rates.

In the securing of motor-vehicle registration papers for 1927, it will be necessary for every Massachusetts citizen to secure or present an insurance policy or bond at the same time, Mr. Monk explained. The conference was held for the purpose of securing information, on the basis of which the commissioner will later determine rates.

As a result of the conference, representatives of the insurance brokers and general agents agreed to meet and compile figures showing their average cost of operation. The greater number of general agents expressing their views yesterday said that the present cost of doing business approximates 8 per cent of the premium received. In some instances, they said, the figure runs as high as 10 per cent. Among the brokers, it was the general belief that business cannot be done at a profit of less than the existing 17½ per cent of the premium.

The commissioner was of the opinion that the agents and general agents will secure a large amount of additional business in the writing of the automobile insurance, and hence will reduce overhead expenses. James H. Carney, a Boston insurance man, disagreed with the commissioner as to any marked increase in the volume of business, and felt that the public will insure to no greater extent than the law compels them. The meeting was adjourned yesterday afternoon.

LIGHT LOBBY COST $2500

For consolidation of the Worcester Electric Light Company and the Worcester Gas Light Company, which was authorized by a bill in this year's Legislature, the former company paid $2500 to the law firm of Burdett & Wardwell, according to returns filed today at the State House under the "lobby" act.

DEBT TO DECIDE BRIAND CABINET

Ratification Issue to Determine Whether Ministry Will Be Announced

PARIS, June 22 (AP)—Ratification or nonratification of the Washington debt settlement and decisions on other questions bearing on stabilization of exchange and final renovation of French finances will determine whether Aristide Briand's tenth Cabinet, which is now completely recruited, will be officially announced.

Paul Doumer, who is asked to take the Finance Ministry which he left about four months ago after an adverse vote in the Chamber, makes his acceptance conditional upon a previous agreement by the members of the new Cabinet on the precise financial program which the Minister would be obligated to defend without amendment before Parliament.

Increase in Taxes

This plan, which was discussed nearly three hours today by M. Briand, M. Doumer, and others, is understood to involve refunding of the interior debt at lower rates of interest, and an increase in direct taxes, with corresponding reductions in such taxes as have, according to financial experts, caused exportation of capital.

Ratification of the Washington debt agreement is opposed by M. Doumer because he deems it too burdensome, but it is demanded by the expert committee on finances as essential to stabilization. This question was discussed lengthily at today's conference.

M. Poincaré is also understood to be opposed to ratification, while M. Briand and his colleagues of the last Cabinet insist that the pact be accepted.

The discussion was suspended just before noon to allow M. Briand to consult the parliamentary party leaders as to the financial program. The Premier expressed himself as confident that he would be able to announce his Cabinet officially before nightfall.

New Briand Cabinet

M. Briand's new Cabinet, as far as it has been arranged this morning, was as follows.

Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Briand.

Minister of Justice and for Alsace-Lorraine, Raymond Poincaré.

Minister of Finance, Paul Doumer.

Minister of War, Paul Painlevé.

Minister of Marine, Jules Leygues.

Minister of the Interior, Jean Durand.

Minister of Colonies, Leon Perrier.

Minister of Public Works, Pierre Laval.

Minister of Agriculture, Francois Binet.

Minister of Commerce, Charles Chaumet.

Minister of Public Instruction, Maurice Colrat.

Minister of Labor, M. Daniel-Vincent.

The undersecretaries with ministerial rank were yet to be selected.

YALE HOLDS ITS COMMENCEMENT

Woolsey Hall Exercises Are Preceded by Procession of Seniors

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 22 (AP)—Customs change even in such an old-time institution as Yale, for at this, the two hundred and twenty-fifth, the graduation program was cut in twain, 624 seniors receiving their degrees today which honorary and professional school degrees will be conferred tomorrow.

The Tuesday of commencement week has always been alumni day. For the first time the alumni meeting of the morning was given up and the time used for a commencement session in Woolsey Hall, preceded by the procession of candidates for degrees in course.

Alumni day on Washington's Birthday, developed in recent years into a gathering of graduates at the university had, in part, replaced the alumni day of commencement but the change in program has been forced by lack of accommodations for all candidates for degrees, with alumni and guests, in Woolsey Hall.

The graduation exercises of Yale College and Sheffield Scientific School held today followed precedent. Dr James Rowland Angell, president of the university, presided, and the candidates for degrees were presented by the deans.

Highest honors in Yale College and Sheffield Scientific School were awarded as follows:

To Basil Davenport of Louisville, Ky., the DeForest prize of $100, awarded to the senior in Yale College "who shall write and pronounce an English oration in the best manner."

To Charles Hastings Willard of Minneapolis, Minn., the Alpheus Henry Snow prize of $500, awarded to the senior in Yale College who, "through the combination of intellectual achievement, fine character and personality, shall be adjudged by the faculty to have done most for Yale by inspiring in his classmates an admiration and love for the best traditions of high scholarship."

To George Wilson Pierson of New York City, the Warren Memorial high scholarship prize, awarded to the candidate for the bachelor of arts degree who has the highest rank in scholarship.

To Dana Yung Kwai, the Russell Henry Chittenden prize of $100, awarded to the candidate for the degree of bachelor of science who has the highest rank in scholarship.

To William Wakeman Sherwood of Bridgeport, Conn., the Edward O. Lanphier Memorial prize of $100, awarded for proficiency in the field of electrical engineering, and especially for initiative in research work.

To Roland Newbold Jessop of Cleveland, O., the Chester Harding Plimpton prize of $75 and a medal.

Pops 'Request' Night Will Be Repeated

Handel's Largo Rated Most Popular Number by Patrons in Recent Balloting

The popularity of Handel's "Largo," Schubert-Wilhelmj's "Ave Maria" and other musical compositions, favored in the recent voting by patrons of the Symphony Pops concerts, was shown beyond doubt last night, when between 1500 and 2000 persons, seeking to attend the first request night of the Pops at which the chosen favorites were to be played, had to turned away.

So great was the demand for tickets that it was announced today that the program will be repeated Thursday night, July 1. The program was made up in accordance with the preferences of the patrons of the Pops, expressed by means of ballots which had been cast at concerts over a period of several weeks.

The crowd began to assemble two hours before the concert started, and many who stood in line from that time until the time of the concert were unable to buy tickets.

The crowd extended down Massachusetts Avenue as far as St. Stephens Street, and overflowed into the street in places.

The management of the Pops expressed surprise at the remarkable demonstration. "It shows, at least, that the audiences know what they want," one official said.

In the voting, more than 15,000 ballots were registered. "The Largo" received 4723 votes, the largest number. "Ave Maria" was a close second, with 4709 votes. Others receiving large votes were standard compositions of long popularity.

WELLESLEY CONFERS DEGREES IN NEW ALUMNAE BUILDING

thusiasm for student work was aroused by a visit to the college.

To Miss Dorothy Bruce of Richmond, Va., a member of the Phi Beta Kappa Society, the Erasmus history prize was given for her thesis on the subject: "The Studious Race of Dr. John Dee."

The Woodrow Wilson prize in modern politics was awarded to Miss Helen Elizabeth Smith of Cleveland Heights, O., for her thesis on "La Follette and the 1924 Presidential Contest." Miss Smith is the 1926 president of student government and has been active in college politics since her freshman year.

Miss Suzanne Ruth Schoenberger of Cleveland won the Davenport prize for reading and speaking. This award was established by George H. Davenport of Boston, vice-president of the board of trustees.

The Alice Freeman Palmer Fellowship was awarded for the year 1926-1927 to Miss Elizabeth Gilman, A. B., 1923, A. M., 1925, Mount Holyoke College, and a student at Yale University, 1925-1926, for research in the field of chemistry.

Announcing the donations which have been made to the college during the past year, Miss Pendleton said that $171,000 had been contributed to the Semicentennial Fund. This brings the total to $6,406,000 with $2,594,000 to be raised. Included in the gifts are $25,000 from Mrs. Henry H. Hilton to establish the Ruth Sibley Music Fund in honor of her daughter, $10,000 from Mrs. Mary Harriman Severance of the class of 1885 for the Alexandra Botanic Gardens, $2000 from Miss Caroline Hazard, former Wellesley College president, for the Wellesley choir fund, and $1700 from the faculty, administrative officers and alumnae for the Mary Caswell Scholarship Fund.

Mr. Huntingdon closed the exercises with the benediction.

Walter Hampden Among Guests

At the conclusion of the commencement exercises, the trustees and the alumnæ of the college entertained the members of the graduating class at a luncheon held in Alumnæ Hall. Miss Pendleton presided over the luncheon. Walter Hampden, Shakespearean actor, and honorary member of the class of 1926, gave a short address to his adopted classmates. Mr. Hampden received an honorary degree at Brown University this last week.

Among the other speakers were Prof. Helen Darbishire, visiting professor from Summerville College, Oxford; Miss Anne Cobb, an alumna from the class of 1896, from Hindman School, Kentucky; Mrs. Frederick G. Atkinson, newly elected alumna trustee, and Miss Elizabeth Howe, president of the graduating class.

This afternoon the Wellesley Student's Aid Society held its annual meeting in Founders' Hall. At 7:30 o'clock in Alumnæ Hall the Alumnæ Assembly will take place, with Mrs. Winifred Hawkbridge Dixon of the class of 1906 in charge.

This evening the senior class will hold a banquet in Alumnæ Hall. The toast for 1926 will be delivered by Miss Katherine Tracy of Buffalo. Other speakers remain a matter of secrecy to the class until the event.

Midnight Step-Singing

The final event on the commencement program is the "Midnight Step-Singing." Starting on Simpson Hall at 10:30 tonight, the returning alumnæ, along with the newly graduated class, advance to the chapel steps, robed in caps and gowns and carrying bright Japanese lanterns. As they march, they sing, and when the chapel steps are reached, the older alumnæ give ceremonious welcome to the new members. The whole repertoire of Wellesley's favorite songs from the "Prairie Flower," and the time-honored "Where, O Where, Are the Verdant Freshmen?" to the Alma Mater follows. At midnight the Musical Cheer is sung, and as the last echo sounds the groups disband.

Yesterday several hundred Wellesley alumnæ, including delegations from nine different classes, returned to celebrate Alumnæ Day. Following the class meetings of the morning came the annual alumnæ parade in which graduates, attired in gay and varid costumes, formed a picturesque scene on the Tower Court green.

TRADE UNIONISTS FINED

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, June 22 (AP)—The Supreme Court has decided that the Danish Trade Union Council must pay 130,000 kronen damages for "maliciously" interfering with the affairs of a large number of Danish farmers. It was claimed by the farmers that they suffered heavy losses when they were unable to obtain necessary farmhands because of a union boycott.

EX-SOLDIERS MAKE CLAIM FOR INVENTION

British Commission Hears Case Arising Out of War

By Cable from Monitor Bureau

LONDON, June 22—Two former soldiers of the British Army, who while members of the Royal Air Force in 1916 devised a method for restoring worn-out parts of airplane engines, using this salvaging process on £2,000,000 worth of machines, were claimants today before the royal commission on awards to inventors. The only reward they had received for a work of such magnitude, their counsel claimed was "promotion as sergeants with pay of 10s. per diem." Both men, first class air mechanics, overcame the difficulty of securing a uniform electro deposit of iron on the worn machines by means of building up a vat of wax around the part to be plated, employing a spiral wire by an operated rocking arm to keep the solution continuously agitated.

The work was first done in copper, later in harder metals and finally in iron. Tests made showed that the metal on the deposited worn parts was harder than the original.

Aircraft log books introduced in evidence proved that parts which had become worn after 50 hours, ran 200 hours after the electro process, thus saving the Government a vast sum. The method was later adopted in motor transport repair shops. C. E. Stuart, one of the former soldier claimants is now in South Africa.

CYLINDRICAL HOUSES ERECTED IN GERMANY

DRESDEN, Germany, June 22 (AP)—Standard houses built in cylindrical form have been erected at Greiz, in Saxony, from plans designed by a civil engineer, with a view to solving the housing problem. All sections of the houses are interchangeable. The walls are made of sheets of non-conducting material, and are lined inside with spacious cupboards. Rooms are on two floors, which may be occupied by separate families. A cupola, intended for storage purposes, surmounts the house with a colonnaded verandə around it.

The new homes are said to be both comfortable and cheap.

MINERS OPPOSE 8-HOUR PROJECT

Reduction of Wages Preferred, Declares British Federation President

By Cable from Monitor Bureau

LONDON, June 22—More than meets the eye is understood to be behind the Government's decision, now announced, to postpone the debate on the coal miners hours' bill until next week. This bill makes an increase in the underground working day from seven to eight hours permissive in colleries where employers and men agree to this change.

The bill was to have been debated tomorrow and the change now made—though nominally merely to enable the discussion to extend over two days—has the effect also of giving the miners' leaders time to make other proposals for a settlement after their conference with all the other trade union executives, arranged for Friday.

The miners' leaders object to the mines bill even more strongly than to lowering wages, since—apart from its effect upon the workers who might be prepared to accept it—it means a blow to a national settlement of working conditions and hence to the entire centralized system of trade unionism in general and to the Miners' Federation in particular. This because—given an eight-hour day—the mine owners have indicated their willingness to continue in the more prosperous coal districts wages so favorable that the miners are expected to accept them, thereby breaking away from the national settlement.

This consideration is associated with a recent statement by Herbert Smith, president of the Miners' Federation, that—if compelled to choose between a reduction in wages and a longer day—he will recommend a reduction. Other national trade union executives take a similar view.

There is thus a strong movement for finding some other way out, which, it is hoped, may produce something helpful before next week's debate.

BRITISH CONCLUDE SUCCESSFUL FLIGHT

Army Airplanes Finish Journey From Africa

By Cable from Monitor Bureau

LONDON, June 22—Alighting on the water at Lee on the Solent yesterday, four army airplanes concluded the final stage of their 14,000-miles journey. Starting on March 1 from Cairo, they flew to Cape Town. Leaving there on April 19 they reached Cairo without incident and flew on to Aboukir, where they fitted floats for the final flight to England. The air vice-marshal, Sir Geoffrey Salmond, welcoming Wing Commander C. W. H. Pulford, in charge of the flight, said that it was a fine example of the reliability and sturdiness of British aircraft and engines.

The flight was carried through in exactly schedule time without replacement either to machines or engines. These Napier-Lion engines completed together 56,000 miles without being overhauled. For the first time four Union Jacks fluttering from the short masts on the pilots' cockpits had been shown in the heart of Africa, demonstrating to every white colony that it was in close touch with a defence unit in case of necessity.

ARRESTS IN TURKISH PLOT ARE CONTINUING

By Special Cable

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 22—During the past two days almost all the important members of the Progressist Party have been arrested because of alleged implication in a plot against Kemal Pasha, President of the Turkish Republic. These include Ali Fuad Pasha and Refet Pasha, who took over Constantinople from allied occupation; Kiazim Kara Bekir Pasha, Djaafar Tayyar Pasha, Feridoun Kikri Bey, Bekir Samy Bey, who signed the London treaty, and Noureddine Bey.

The number of arrests made since the discovery of the plot now exceeds 60. If the reports current are to be believed, the counter-revolutionary movement is one of vast proportions. Indignation meetings have been held here and in Smyrna, at which the severe punishment of the culprits is demanded.

Kemal Pasha declares that in the event of his suffering personal injury he is certain the Nation will avenge him. Indications point to further important revelations.

SPAIN ANNOUNCES ABSTENTION

By Special Cable

GENEVA, June 22—The Spanish declaration regarding its nonattendance at the Assembly of the League of Nations next September has not taken Geneva by surprise, because it was already known Spain would refuse re-election to a nonpermanent seat on the League Council. It is noted that nothing is said of a breach with the League and the Spanish minister's statement is regarded as friendlier to the League than Brazil's notice of withdrawal in two years.

Family Horse Wins Point From Capital Traffic Chief

Dignified Trotting, But No Galloping, Will Be Permitted on Sixteenth Street

Special from Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 22—Horses, if their pedigree, appearance and equipment warrant, are to be permitted to walk or trot, not to gallop, of course, on Sixteenth Street in the Capital City.

Maurice O. Eldridge, director of traffic, was so concerned with the regulation of automobiles that he saw nothing for it but to warn horses off the bouluevards where they had been wont to travel in high stepping pride for succeeding administrations. The automobile came in with a rush to Washington, but the horse has gone out slowly. The White House stables still have at least one pair which carry the housekeeper to market in a dignified old carriage every morning.

Several ladies of fashion and conservative tastes still ride in state behind their own horses. One of them made an issue of the matter when Mr. Eldridge made his ruling against horse-drawn vehicles on certain streets where the afternoon drive was still a feature, even though tending to vanish.

It was well that the Jusserands were no longer at the French Embassy on Sixteenth Street. Surely Mme. Jusserand, whose erect figure and nodding plumes were familiar to the town as she drove by in her Victoria behind a pair of fine bays with splendid harness, and M. Jusserand, whose alert eyes saw everything in Washington for a score of years, would have claimed diplomatic immunity if they had been here when the edict against the horse went forth. The ambassadors who have come and gone since have been satisfied with the automobile, best French makes and therefore have made no sign.

Members of Congress have been talked to by owners of presentable horses and the traffic director, in order to retain his authority in toto over traffic has given assurances that he will permit horse-drawn broughams and the like, even an occasional buggy that may wander in from the outlying provinces of Maryland and Virginia, if they will permit him to retain full power over the issuance and revocation of permits and other matters pertaining to traffic.

RAINIER PARK OPENS GATES FOR SEASON

Rainier National Park, Washington, officially opened its gates to the people of the United States on June 15. The "American Switzerland" had sufficiently emerged from its winter blanket of snows at that time to usher in its thirty-seventh annual season, it is announced.

Tourists from all parts of the world, numbering more than 173,000, visited the great 14,000-foot glacial peak during a three-month period last season, government figures show.

The scenic attractions there and the alpine sports during the summer months are expected to bring the number of visitors in 1926 to approximately 200,000, it is estimated.

DARTMOUTH HAS EXERCISES

Class of 350 Men Graduated and Nine Honorary Degrees Conferred

HANOVER, N. H., June 22 (Special)—Commencement exercises concluding the one hundred and fifty-seventh year of Dartmouth College were held today, when a class of 350 men was graduated. Nine honorary degrees were conferred.

The speakers and their subjects were: William Alexander Campbell of Flagstone, B. C., Canada, "The Business Man at Patron"; Edward Walker Miller of Buffalo, N. Y., "The Inspiration of Nietzsche"; Donald Kincaide Mackay of Quincy, Mass., "Dartmouth Loyalty."

The honorary degrees, conferred by Dr. Ernest M. Hopkins, president of the college, were as follows:

Master of Arts—Charles Gilbert Milham '06, Los Angeles, Calif., secretary, All-Year Club of Southern California; Harlan Colby Pearson '93, Concord, N. H., journalist and secretary to the Governor of New Hampshire.

Doctor of Commercial Science—Frank Herbert Hardison '76, Wellesley, Mass., former insurance commissioner of Massachusetts.

Doctor of Divinity—Walter Amos Morgan '11, Chicago, Ill., pastor of the New First Congregational Church.

Doctor of Science—George Fiske Hardy '88, New York City, consulting engineer; Arthur Hiler Ruggles '02, Providence, R. I., Yale University.

Doctor of Laws—Robert James Peaslee '98, Manchester, N. H., honorary Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New Hampshire; James Thomson Shotwell, New York City, director, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and professor of history, Columbia University; Sir Frederick Whyte, London, Eng., editor and statesman.

Mr. Millan, awarded the honorary degree of Master of Arts for his public service work, is one of the founders as well as executive officer of the All-Year Club of Southern California, which is said to be one of the first great organizations to advertise a section rather than a city. He was also a factor in the formation of the Pacific Coast Empire Association, which covers the entire Pacific coast and works on the basis of "all for one and one for all."

LEAGUE'S WELFARE WORK PRESENTED

Dame Katharine Furse Tells of Aid to Children

Child welfare work of the League of Nations was discussed by Dame Katharine Furse of England, prominent member of the League's committee on child protection, at a luncheon tendered in her honor yesterday by representatives of 27 welfare organizations, at the Twentieth Century Club.

Dame Katharine is one of the few English women upon whom the honor corresponding to knighthood has been bestowed for service in war work. In her address yesterday she told of the work of the social department of the League of Nations, and said:

"Whether or not you are certain about the political side of the League of Nations, what it is achieving on the social side is worth while. The effect of alcoholism, the effect of child labor, and the promotion of recreation are three subjects now being studied."

She discussed other international movements, such as the First International Congress of Boy Scouts, the recent International Congress of Girl Scouts held in the United States and the International Conference on the Migration of Children.

The luncheon meeting was called by Richard K. Conant, Massachusetts Commissioner of Public Welfare. The other speakers were Sanford Bates, Massachusetts Commissioner of Correction; Alfred F. Whitman, executive secretary of the Children's Aid Association; Miss Ethel M. Johnson, Associate Commissioner of Labor and Industries; Merrill E. Champion, director of the division of hygiene of the State Department of Public Health, and Mrs. Arthur W. Bart, commissioner of Girl Scouts for Massachusetts.

Dame Katharine visited the Boston Juvenile Court, the Judge Baker Foundation, and the Boston Continuation Schools, and expressed herself as greatly pleased with the work which is being done by them.

RAILWAY OPPOSES PERMIT TO BUS LINE

Opposition to the granting of a permanent permit for the operation of motorbusses between Taunton, East Bridgewater and Easton by the Abbott Coach Company was presented before the Public Utilities Commission yesterday by Fred W. Cummings, representing the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway.

Mr. Cummings contended that David I. Abbott, owner and operator of the lines, is operating illegally by carrying passengers from forbidden points, and also charged that Mr. Abbott had offered to sell out to the railway company for $12,000. The charges were denied by Mr. Abbott and John H. Sullivan of Taunton, his attorney. The commission took the matter under advisement.

HOMES FOR BIRDS PROVIDED BY PUPILS

SPRINGFIELD, Vt., June 22 (Special)—More than 300 birds have been provided with homes in which to rear their young by the action of the class in manual training at Springfield High School. Under the direction of Prof. James Griswold, the boys have made bird houses and placed them about in various sections of the town for the convenience of their feathered friends.

One hundred and fifty bird houses were constructed in all within the classrooms, and the work was part of the program of the class. The class members distributed the bird homes and practically every member has reported a pair of birds making use of each house within a week after they were placed out of doors.

Lowthorpe School Invites Public to Visit Gardens

Rapid Growth and Wide Influence of Its Landscape Architecture Classes for Women Base Effort to Interest Broader Financial Support

During the commencement season, which brings many former students and friends of the Lowthorpe School of Landscape Architecture and Horticulture for Women as visitors to the vicinity of Boston, Mrs. Cyrus Winslow Merrell, president of the school, and the faculty have especially invited those interested to journey to the gardens at Groton, there to observe the growth of the school, and to study its collections of Alpine and other plants which make an informatively valuable addition to the record of horticulture in the United States.

Lowthorpe School was founded in 1901 by Mrs. Edward Gilchrist Low to train women in facility for providing, specifically, such surroundings as Mr. Eliot desires to see increased. It is pointed out that the individual who makes herself an efficient landscape architect acquires creative power in two ways: by the accumulation of a store of facts and a facility for organizing this experience; by ability to analyze individual problems and to seek their solution in a logical way that, at the end, they may be convinced that the best solution possible under given conditions has been secured.

Like architecture, its sister profession in the fine arts, landscape architecture requires of its master diverse abilities not often found in the same individual: the æsthetic appreciation and creative power of the artist, together with an executive skill for business.

The landscape architect must know the materials of the art, ground forms, vegetation and structures in their relation to the landscape. It is necessary to be fully aware, on the one hand, of what results are practically possible with such materials and, on the other hand, what type of beauty such materials can best produce.

These are the items of knowledge with which the Lowthorpe School has been concerned in the arrangement of its training for women. The school is an old colonial house overlooking a farm of 17 acres. There are two drafting rooms and a library. Gardens and greenhouses serve as laboratory rooms where students learn practical horticulture.

A small nursery specializes in rock plants and is conducted by the students. The school grounds, with their trees and shrubs, together with the surrounding country having its own flora, enable students to become familiar with the plant material so essential to success in landscape design.

The school constantly has visiting lecturers on matters pertaining to the sum of knowledge necessary to the graduate landscape architect. This year, for instance, it brought to this country from Geneva, Switzerland, M. Henry Correvon of the Jardin Alpin d'Acclimatation, who is acknowledged to be one of the foremost authorities on Alpine plants in the world.

As a contributor to English and French periodicals, as the author of many books on his subject, and, above all, as a distinguished botanist and gardener, M. Correvon had already many friends in the United States when he came here to deliver a series of lectures over the country in the interest of the endowment fund being sought to extend the work of Lowthorpe School.

JAMAICA PLAIN SCHOOL SITE UNDER SCRUTINY

Investigation of the purchase by the city of 144,000 square feet of land in Jamaica Plain, a part of the original Charles Curtis estate, for the new Agassiz-Bowditch district school, is being conducted by the Boston Finance Commission. The price the city agreed to pay is $90,000.

The commission halted the completion of the transaction. It is seeking to ascertain what the total tract of 379,999 feet cost the purchaser who contracted to sell to the city. While feeling that the purchase is being made at too great a cost, the commission further objects to the site because the projected schoolhouse will face on Pershing Road, an unfinished thoroughfare.

PAPER COMPANY'S TAX IS REDUCED

HOLYOKE, Mass., June 22 (Special)—Word has been received by S. L. Willson, receiver in equity for the American Writing Paper Company, that the additional tax assessments for four years ending 1920, imposed by the Bureau of Internal Revenue after an extended examination of the company's books, have been reduced by the federal authorities from $1,581,436.97 to $284,388.07.

While this remaining amount is considered unjust, Mr. Willson said, it will be paid, and in this way the company will be enabled to advance more speedily toward a reorganization. The company for two years had waged a protest against the levy.

PLANT MANAGEMENT COURSE WELCOMED

Many Firms Enroll for Amherst Institute

Registrations for membership in the Industrial Institute for Management Problems which the State Division of University Extension will conduct at Amherst in July are being received daily at the State House. Fifteen industrial plants in all parts of the Comonwealth and several in Rhode Island and Connecticut have already sent in applications. It is anticipated that in addition to these and other enrollments at least one delegate from each of the other New England states and New York will be present.

The institute, which takes place in the two weeks from July 6 to 16, will consist of lectures by recognized experts on the latest improvements in the various divisions of industrial management to be followed by open forum discussions of problems in which each man will be asked to contribute from the fruits of his experience. Industrial finance, safety, personnel problems, materials, control, foreman training, and workmen's compensation are among the topics.

William J. Fortune of the National Shawmut Bank, Boston; Daniel Bloomfield of the Boston Chamber of Commerce; Willard Freeland of Massachusetts Institute of Technology; W. O. Lichtner of Litchtner and Thompson Co.; Johnson O'Connor of the General Electric Company; R. H. Spahr of the United States Chamber of Commerce; and E. G. Plowman, industrial relations adviser of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, are among the men who will lecture.

OLD INDENTURE BILL SHOWS 'BINDING OUT' METHODS IN VERMONT

Early Custom Among Parents of Boys Persisted Until About Civil War Time

CASTLETON, Vt., June 22 (Special)—An interesting old "indenture" bill, strongly reminiscent of the old feudal system and illustrative of an early Vermont custom, has been brought to light by Miss Mary Higley of this town. The indenture was made March 31, 1790, between Preserved Kellogg of Castleton and Zadock Remington, also of Castleton, binding out Kellogg's son, Charles, then a minor of 16 years, until the son should arrive at the full age of 21 years.

In the first part of this curious bargain, Charles Kellogg agreed to serve his master, Zadock Remington, faithfully, to keep his master's secrets and obey his lawful commands. The agreement also provided that Charles "shall do no damage to his master's goods nor lend them unlawfully."

Among several of the strongly-worded practices in which the boy swore not to indulge were the agreements not to contract matrimony during the term of five years, and not to absent himself by day or by night without his said master's consent, behaving himself like a dutiful and respectful fellow toward his master at all times, becoming in reality his obedient son until the time stipulated by the indenture.

The master, Zadock Remington, incurred reciprocal responsibilities which made the whole agreement still more feudal in character. He promised to bring up the boy Kellogg "in the art and business of blacksmith work"; to provide him with suitable food and lodging; to see to his moral and religious life and to instruct the boy "to read well in the Bible and to write a legible handwriting, and to do the first four rules of arithmetick."

The agreement also provided that at the end of the stipulated term, Zadock Remington must dismiss said Charles with two good suits of apparel, one "suitable for the Lord's Day," and the other for every-day use.

The process of "binding out" boys and girls was common in Vermont, persisting until about the time of the Civil War, and there have been a few instances since that time.

TRUSTEES ELECTED AT SMITH COLLEGE

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., June 22 (AP)—Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow of New York City was elected to the board of trustees of Smith College today. She succeeds Mrs. Ruth Standish of Springfield who retired. No member of the board serves more than 10 years.

Mrs. Kendall Emerson of Worcester was named to the alumnae trusteeship vacated by Mrs. Morrow upon her election. Mrs. Emerson was graduated from Smith in 1897 as Josephine Sewall and had been president of the Alumnae Association since 1923.

SLIGHT DROP IN WAGE SCALE AND EMPLOYMENT IS RECORDED

Gains Are Reported, However, in 8 of Massachusetts 38 Industries—Figures Cover Comparisons Made in April and May

A decrease of 2.8 per cent in the wage scale and of 2.5 in employment in Massachusetts industries is reported in the monthly industrial survey issued today by the State Department of Labor and Industries, comparing April and May.

"In eight of the 39 industries there were gains in employment, these gains being relatively unimportant, the report states. "Nearly one-half of all employees shown on part time were in the three leading industries of the State.

"The number of persons represented in the May pay rolls of these 983 establishments was 232,642, and their earnings aggregated $5,641,607, or an average of $24.25 per person. For the 238,727 persons employed in these same establishments during the pay-roll week in April, 1926, the weekly earnings aggregated $5,803,874, or an average of $24.31 per person.

"In general, employment conditions showed no great change in May as compared with April. In the manufacture of automobiles, including bodies and parts, there was a decrease from 4832 to 4171, (13.7 per cent) in the number employed in the 17 establishments reporting. In March these same 17 establishments were employing 5616 wage-earners. In addition, in this industry more than two-thirds of the employees were on part time in May, as compared with nearly all on full time in April. Both the woolen and worsted goods industry and the cotton goods industry showed slight decreases in employment.

"A classification of the data on the basis of full and part time shows that of the 232,642 persons reported for in May, 133,358 (57.3 per cent) were employed in establishments reporting full-time schedules, and the remaining 99,284 (42.7 per cent) were employed on part time, and in this respect conditions were very similar to those reports in a year ago.

"In May all of the establishments representing four industries reported their employees as working on full-time schedules, as follows: Gas and by-products, newspaper printing and publishing, rubber footwear, and stationery goods. In copper, tin, and sheet iron, and in silk goods, all but less than 1 per cent were on full time. In 22 other industries a majority were similarly employed, making a total of 28 out of 39 industries in which all, or a majority of the employees, were in establishments operating on full-time schedules."

FURNITURE MEN PROTEST RATES

About 150 Manufacturers in New England Unite

GARDNER, Mass., June 22 (AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission is being bombarded these days by protests from New England interests against existing or pending freight rates.

The last movement comes from the furniture manufacturers. Numbering about 150 in New England, they are organizing as a unit in an effort to have removed what they describe as freight discriminations against this section of the country.

The initiative was taken by a group of chair, fiber and other furniture manufacturers in central Massachusetts through the Gardner Chamber of Commerce. A temporary committee has called a general meeting of all New England furniture manufacturers at the Boston Chamber of Commerce on the afternoon of Friday, June 25, for the purpose of perfecting an all New England organization.

The immediate object is to assure adequate presentation to the Interstate Commerce Commission of the New England situation in this respect. The commission recently ordered an investigation on a country-wide basis of furniture rates, classifications, rules and packing requirements.

ASKS BUSINESS FIRMS TO AID PARKING LAW

Mayor Urges Employees Be Required to Obey Rules

In an effort to better traffic conditions in Boston, Mayor Nichols is appealing by letter to the heads of hundreds of business concerns in the city asking their co-operation with the city in urging their employees not to park their cars in the streets beyond the time permitted by law. In his letter to business men the Mayor says:

"I feel sure that you will agree with me that the practice of extended parking ought to be abolished. May I, therefore, count upon your assistance in helping to meet the present serious situation. A word from you would also be greatly appreciated."

Of this appeal Mayor Nichols said: "These all-day parkers in many cases are executives and employees of business houses. It is my belief that they will be willing to assist in the solution of the traffic problem if the matter is placed squarely before them. Therefore, I am sending this general letter to the heads of business firms, directing such firms to assist by posting notices, to executives and employees, urging them not to leave their cars on the streets beyond the time permitted by law. If we can secure their immediate cooperation I believe in a very short time the city will experience a marked improvement in traffic conditions and that much intolerable delay, inconvenience and loss will be avoided."

As the result of a recent order by the street commissioners, commercial vehicles, with the exception of light delivery trucks, were yesterday excluded from Newbury Street, between Dartmouth and Hereford Streets. The order is similar to that in operation in Beacon and Marboro Streets, with the exception that in the two latter thoroughfares trucks are barred between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m.

HOUSE PASSES MALDEN BILL

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP) — The House has passed and sent to the Senate the Underhill bill to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to acquire a public building site in Malden, Mass., and disregard the requirement that the site be donated. The cost of the site must come within the present appropriation for the building.

333 DEGREES GIVEN BY NORTHEASTERN

Exercises of Graduating Class Held at Opera House

Frank Palmer Speare, president of Northeastern University, conferred degrees on 333 students of the university at exercises in the Boston Opera House last evening.

The commencement address was delivered by Dr. Augustus O. Thomas, Commissioner of Education for the State of Maine, and president of the World Federation of Educational Associations. His subject was "Education and Its Relation to World Progress." The Rev. Vaughan Dabney, pastor of the Second Church in Dorchester, offered the invocation.

Prof. John B. Pugsley, registrar of the School of Engineering, was chief marshal. Prof. Harold W. Melvin was assistant marshal. Class marshals were Carl Wesley Nelson for the school of engineering, Raymond Edson Willis for the school of commerce and finance, Louis Constant Gobron for the school of law, Andrew Hawes King for the school of business administration and William Francis Hosman for the evening polytechnic school. Music was furnished by the Boston Festival Orchestra.

Candidates for the degrees were presented to President Speare by the dean of each school and the diplomas were formally awarded by the president and secretary of the university, Galen D. Light.

The School of Engineering had the largest graduating class, 157 students receiving their bachelor's degree in the various engineering sciences.

The Law School was next with 111 students receiving the degree of bachelor of laws. The School of Commerce and Finance gave 37 degress and the Evening Polytechnic School awarded 16 diplomas.

This year the School of Business Administration graduated its first class. The degre eof bachelor of business administration was awarded to 12 students, all of whom were members of the first freshman class when this school, the youngest in the Northeastern system, was started four years ago. Of the graduating class in the School of Engineering 28 received their degrees with honors. The School of Business Administration graduated six men with honors and the School of Law, nine students cum laude.

BRUNSWICK SAILS FOR TEXAS

Capt. Asa F. Davison, who recently organized the Newtex Line, operating between Boston and Gulf ports, is to take office as second vice-president of the Black Diamond Steamship Corporation, it was announced today, but will retain his connection with the Newtex Line. The steamer Brunswick, the second vessel of the line to leave Boston in the new service, sailed this afternoon for Texas City. Calls will be made at New York and Norfolk to take on additional cargo.

EMPLOYEE TO BE HONORED

WORCESTER, Mass., June 22 (Special)—Archibald McDermid, general agent of the local office of the American Railway Express Company, who has just completed 53 years of continuous employment with the company, will be tendered a testimonial in the Bancroft Hotel on Saturday night, by officials and co-workers of the company. Officials of the company from adjoining cities and as far distant points as Montreal will participate.

POLICE FORCE AUGMENTED

Fifty-nine men composed the second group of new patrolmen to be appointed yesterday to the Boston police force by Herbert A. Wilson, police commissioner, pursuant to the law enacted by the last Legislature allowing him to employ 300 more officers. With this second addition, more than 100 new men have been placed on the force within one month. Other detachments are to follow until the entire quota is complete, some time next fall.

DIAMOND JUBILEE YEAR

Harvard Alumni Join Seniors in Celebration of Class Day

Follow Stream of Events From Chapel Service to Tree Day Exercises and Confetti Battle

With throngs of returning alumni revisiting the colorfully decorated Harvard Yard, the 1926 senior class today celebrated Class Day with an eventful program of exercises and pageantry.

From early morning until late afternoon the traditional festivities followed with scarcely an interruption. At 9 o'clock the seniors attended service in Appleton Chapel, where they were addressed by the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Park, minister of First Unitarian Church of Boston.

Following the service, the Class Day exercises were continued in Sanders Theater, which included the delivery of the class oration by Edward C. Aswell of Nashville, Tenn., the class ode by Alman G. Cooke of New York, and the class poem by Charles A. Smart of Forest Hills, L. I. Dressed in their academic robes, the graduating class assembled in front of Holworthy Hall and marched to the theater in a body. The Rev. Dr. Park opened the exercises with prayer.

The Class Ode

The class ode, which Mr. Cooke read, and which was later sung by the seniors to the tune of "Fair Harvard" under the leadership of Kenneth M. Rogers, was as follows:

For a while we must part, for the sands show the hour
That must mark our last gathering here;
As we go here's a health to the Harvard we loved,
And the freedom fair Harvard holds dear.
We have reached the last signpost together, old friends,
We must leave the fond shelter of youth;
Of what we have found and of what we may work,
God grant that some portion be truth.

In the dust of the highway we met for a space,
Shared each burden, each freshening draught;
Adversity's winds and its buffets we've scorned,
And together at destiny laughed.
To the fork of the roadway we've traveled, old friends,
By this fellowship gladdened a while;
Whether sunshine or tempest attend on your track,
Let us part, as we met, with a smile.

Constructive Criticism

In his class oration, Mr. Aswell said that the real test of education is the ability for constructive criticism, and that it should be the objective to train students in the process of thinking.

"While it is true that higher education has at last been brought within the reach of the masses, it is not true that the masses have been educated; and it is no longer considered heresy to question whether they can be," he declared. "Some of the leading colleges of the country, Harvard among them, have recently decided to limit and select their enrollment. More important still, Harvard was the first great university to adopt an elastic system, and thus to shift emphasis from the mass to the individual."

"This has been the distinctive merit of the Harvard tutorial system; and it seems to me that the test of democracy is whether, by some such method of selective training, the colleges can bring forth truly educated men capable of assuming intelligent leadership. Each is acquiring a sort of knowledge for use. Each is trying, according to the best of his information, to understand the world, so that through understanding he can control the problems of life.

Training in Thinking

"It seems to me that the real value of a college education is simply an attitude of mind. As we go out into the world, this attitude will determine our method of approach to the problems we shall have to face. At the present time, in religion, in government, in every department of life and thought, great questions are being agitated, and we see both primitive-minded and destructive-minded men usurping places of leadership. Educated men are therefore challenged as never before to examine the institutions of society to their foundations, in order to discover upon what solid base they rest."

"The Tragical History of Mr. Loftus" was the tale which Mr. Smart unfolded in a light poetic vein in his class poem of which the first of the 38 verses is illustrative of the humor:

John Loftus lived in Orchardsea,
A suburb of Manhattan
Beside the sea in cherry trees;
(Please, someone, laugh at that'n).

Tree Day Exercises

The afternoon program included the tree day exercises in the Yard.

The Stadium exercises were scheduled for 4 o'clock, after the traditional march of the seniors, the graduates, the three lower classes, and the Glee Club, from the Yard at 3:45 o'clock. Following the parade, cheers and football songs preceded the ivy oration by Elmer Jared Bliss Jr. '26 of Boston.

The oration was followed by several selections sung by the Glee Club and more cheering after which Marion Adolphus Cheek, Jr., of Akron, Ohio, First Marshall, presented the class colors to Arthur Eugene French '29, of Winchester, President of the Freshman class. The exercises were concluded by the singing of "Fair Harvard" and the annual confetti battle.

The rest of the afternoon and evening was taken up by the various spreads inside and outside the Yard, which will be illuminated by 7 o'clock. The senior party will be held in Memorial Hall during the evening.

DEMANDS MADE FOR SOFT COAL

Commerce Commission Told New England Must Have It at Right Price

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 22 (AP)—Testimony taken before Johnston B. Campbell, Interstate Commerce Commissioner, of Spokane, Wash., at the hearing on the petition of the New England Governors' Fuel Commission to make permanent the emergency rate fixed during the anthracite strike for all rail transportation from the West Virginia, western Pennsylvania, and eastern Kentucky mines, indicated a demand for continuous supply of low volatile semibituminous coal.

Cross-examination of witnesses by the opposition served only to emphasize the fact that New England in general and manufacturers in particular are determined that wage-earners shall have an ample supply at all times, regardless of strike conditions, of satisfactory fuel substitutes for anthracite.

Dennis Good of Boston, representing the Smokeless Coal Operators' Association of West Virginia, gave evidence as to the educational campaign in the use of low volatile coal during the recent strike.

This campaign, featured by demonstrations on Boston Common and elsewhere throughout New England, disclosed that while prejudice existed against the use of soft coal, because of smoke and soot, the householders were anxious to learn how to burn the smokeless variety of bituminous coal from the West Virginia fields.

Sees Good Present Demand

Mr. Campbell inquired whether the demand that now exists is sufficient to warrant making permanent the joint rates for all rail transportation from the coal fields, and Mr. Good replied affirmatively.

Cross-examination brought out that the witness had been summoned by the New England Governors' Fuel Commission and had not been sent by the operators whom he represented. Pressed for a detailed account of how the soft coal demonstrations were conducted, Mr. Good admitted that he went to New England primarily to show how to burn West Virginia coal, but he also demonstrated that other fuel could be used as an anthracite substitute. He further said that the Connecticut Governor's proclamation urging the adoption of low volatile coal warned against purchase of high volatile gaseous coal.

Asked whether he advocated the use of bituminous as a substitute for hard coal, the witness caused a laugh even among the opposition by replying, "not as a substitute—it's a better coal." He predicted that it would displace the use of anthracite in New England.

C. L. Eyanson, president of the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut, comprising 1200 firms, testified that his organization desired to establish as many sources of fuel supply as possible. Connecticut people desire smokeless coal for future use to anticipate anthracite strikes and "to avoid anthracite monopoly."

Sought to Overcome Prejudice

Because of the prejudice against soft coal the Manufacturers' Association in seeking the fuel for its thousands of employees, had to substitute something resembling hard coal and therefore turned to West Virginia and western Pennsylvania mines from which they obtained about 75,000 tons, 15,000 of which were in prepared sizes, the rest being "run-of-mine" coal.

Mr. Eyanson, cross-examined, was unable to say whether most of the coal came through on the train or was snapped up by the rail-water-rail route.

Francis Dowd of Boston, representing the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, in following Mr. Eyanson, declared his organization resented an imputation that had been put upon them by Pennsylvania coal producers.

He asserted that the industrial firms were anxious only to make sure their employees got an adequate supply at all times and at reasonable prices and for that reason desired to make available the soft coal under discussion.

SENATORS HEAR OF W. C. T. U. PART

force of the W. C. T. U. was thrown to Governor Pinchot?"

"Yes, with several exceptions."

"And these investigators who were employed by this fund also worked for him?"

"No, they did not."

"Do I understand that your organization had men it selected who did not work for him?"

"No, but I did hear Governor Pinchot say they could work for him only after office hours."

"You know how many officers of Pennsylvania were paid out of funds of this organization?"

"Two assistant attorney-generals, whom we paid $5000 and $6000 a year."

"So that your organization, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, paid the salaries of two assistant attorney-generals and named another?"

"Yes."

"Why did not the Legislature appropriate money after passing the law?" Senator Goff asked.

"Well, many of them had promised to stand for the bill, but they nullified it by not passing an appropriation bill."

Wet Collections Not Known

"Do you know of any money collected from the wets for the campaign?" Senator King asked.

"No, I don't know of any money collected, but they spent a great deal."

"How much have you left of this $40,000 that you had on hand April, 1926?" Reed asked of Mrs. Leah Cobb Marion, custodian of the fund.

"I have on hand $8000."

"Where is the rest?"

"Sent to the Philadelphia bureau."

"The fund is intact then except as spent in the regular way?"

"Yes."

"Wasn't some of this fund used during the election?"

"Absolutely not. It was used solely for enforcement."

Mrs. Seymour Testifies

When Mr. Reed called Mrs. Seymour to the witness stand, Mrs. George asked and was granted permission to come to the front, seating herself a few feet away from Mrs. Seymour. The two women head contending groups in the Pennsylvania Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Mrs. Seymour asserted that she had become a campaign speaker for the Pepper-Fisher ticket after Governor Pinchot had sent letters to county presidents of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, directing them to establish local headquarters for him. She also reiterated her charge that she had been unable to secure an accounting of the $250,000 fund, which, she explained, the Pennsylvania Woman's Christian Temperance Union had raised after the State Legislature had failed to appropriate sufficient funds to operate the State dry law enforcement machinery.

Mrs. George throughout Mrs. Seymour's recital shook her head in vigorous dissent. She finally requested of Mr. Reed permission to "ask through you" a few questions. Mr. Reed agreed, and Mrs. George demanded the names of the county organizations that had worked for Governor Pinchot and to whom he had sent the letter suggesting such action.

"I never saw such a letter, Senators," Mrs. George explained. "And surely if it had been sent out I would have seen a copy or received one."

"I do not care to answer," Mrs. Seymour said, "because it is a matter inside the W. C. T. U. and it would antagonize our women. But Mrs. George knows Governor Pinchot sent such a letter to our county chairwomen asking them to set up an organization for him, to hire stenographers and so on, and to send him their bills."

"I never heard of such a letter," insisted Mrs. George.

"Can you get us a copy of the letter?" Mr. Reed asked Mrs. Seymour, "or give us the names of the women who received it?"

"I don't know if I can," Mrs. Seymour replied. "I don't want to antagonize these women, who do not want to be drawn into this quarrel in our organization. I can give the names to Mrs. George in private but not publicly."

Partial Report Produced

Mrs. Seymour produced a partial report of the Pennsylvania W. C. T. U., showing collections for law enforcement work amounting to $126,000 up to September, 1925. Collections had been made for three years.

"What charge did you make in the campaign?" Mrs. Seymour was asked.

"I did not charge anything wrong or that there was fraud but only that it was impossible to get any definite statement from Mrs. George, Governor Pinchot and Mrs. Marion about the disbursement of this money. We do not believe that Governor Pinchot had anything to do with the money. We objected to our organization being turned over to political purposes and I have proof that Governor Pinchot did that."

John S. Fisher, successful Republican nominee for Governor; Edward E. Beidleman, unsuccessful candidate, and W. Harry Baker, deposed chairman of the State Republican Committee, proved indifferent and noncommittal witnesses. Mr. Baker insisted he could not recall what had been discussed at a conference of Pennsylvania political leaders and Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, at the latter's home in Washington.

Mr. Baker Merely Watched

Mr. Baker testified that he had had nothing to do with the campaign. He had personally been for Mr. Beidleman and Mr. Pepper.

Mr. Fisher stated that he knew of none of the details of the campaign. He said he had personally contributed $4500 to the campaign. He had run as a dry candidate, he stated.

Mr. Beidleman, after first refusing to testify about alleged election frauds in Pittsburgh on the ground that the committee had no jurisdiction to question him, under further examination declared that he had been counted out of the nomination. He asserted that the Mellon organization in Allegheny County had defrauded him of votes. Mr. Beidleman added $118,000 to the total of the committee figures. He stated this was the sum his committee spent.

The latest compilations of expenditures that the committee has are:

Pepper-Fisher campaign	$1,156,000
Vare-Beidleman	596,000
Beidleman	118,000
Pinchot	195,000
Total	$2,065,000

He denied that "any liquor interests" contributed to his campaign. He ran as a wet with Wililam S. Vare, the successful senatorial nominee. Although Mr. Beidleman was far ahead in the first returns, the final count gave Mr. Fisher the gubernatorial nomination by 18,000 votes. Mr. Beidleman instituted court action in Pittsburgh, charging fraud, but later withdrew the proceeding.

Alpha Phi Sorority Delegates Enjoy Trips Along North Shore

Closed Business Session Opens Second Day of the Biennial Convention—Many Historic Points at Lexington and Concord Visited

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., June 22 (Special)—The second day of the twenty-eighth biennial convention of the Alpha Phi Sorority opened at the New Ocean House this morning with a closed business session. This is the first time the fraternity has held a convention in New England since 1899, when it convened in Boston. The last biennial convention was held at Glacier National Park in 1924.

Seldom has the North Shore been visited by a more representative group of young women from all parts of the country, and never was the historic shrine of this section had more appreciative visitors.

Trip to Marblehead

Two hundred and fifty delegates made the trip to Marblehead and Gloucester yesterday afternoon, going by bus and boat. One-half the members went by bus, the other half by boat, returning in reverse order, so that each mode of transportation was enjoyed by all.

To visitors from the middle and the far West, the points of historical interest in and about Boston furnish the thrill of romance and adventure, and they invariably remark, "So much history crowded into such a small place." This afternoon a large party of delegates are visiting Lexington and Concord. The site of the "rude bridge that arched the flood," the Minute Man on Lexington Green and the orchard house in Concord, home of Louisa M. Alcott, will be visited.

For many of the delegates it is the first sight of the Atlantic and several from the middle West are having their first glimpse of the sea. Tomorrow Boston and Cambridge will be visited and later Salem and other local points of historic interest.

Guest of Honor

Mrs. Robert J. Burdette of Pasadena, California, one of the best-known clubwomen in the country as well as one of the founders of the Alpha Phi Sorority is an honored guest of the convention. Mrs. Burdette comes here from the General Federation of Women's Clubs at Atlantic City, in which she took an active part.

Mrs. Burdette told of the organization of the Alpha Phi fraternity 54 years ago, in her room at Syracuse. "I have been in organization work ever since," she said. "I went out to California 40 years ago when the missionary work for woman's suffrage was being done and women's organizations were in their infancy."

Mrs. Burdette believes in internationalism. She has had a wide experience with women's clubs the world over and she has found, she said, that women the world over are interested in the same things. She told of a women's club in Tokyo whose membership represents 10 nationalities and of a mothers' club in Hankow, where practically every nationality is represented, and these are the things, she said, that will leaven international relations.

Mrs. Burdette, who is celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of her graduation from Syracuse University is an honorary member of Phi Beta Kappa, and the degree of Doctor of Laws has been twice conferred upon her, by Syracuse University and by Mills University of Oakland, Calif.

MRS. ROBERT J. BURDETTE

Issues a Paper

The first edition of Callisto, the daily paper which will be published during the convention, came off the press last night in time for the business session. This is the first time that the fraternity has provided an official organ of convention news.

All of the business of the convention is transacted in closed sessions. Last night's meeting was opened by Mrs. Burdette. Alpha Phi has the honor of being the first woman's fraternity to build and own its own chapter house, which is at Syracuse, the home of Alpha Chapter. It has also an established endowment fund of $50,000, which will be increased yearly and from which girls who may require assistance will be helped.

LINER LEVIATHAN TO AID LEGION WORK

Passes to Big Ship Will Be Sold on Army and Navy Day

One outstanding feature of the celebration of Army and Navy Day by the Massachusetts Department of the American Legion will be the issuing of passes to visit the liner Leviathan which is to be drydocked at the Army Base in South Boston at the time of the celebration on Sunday, July 25. In recognition of its services to veterans of the World War and their dependents, the United States Shipping Board has accorded the Massachusetts Legion this concession. The legion, in order that it can carry on its work, will distribute the passes, charging 25 cents each.

Tentative plans being made for the celebration of Army and Navy Day include exhibition drills by detachments of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard and Massachusetts National Guard. Fireboats, naval patrols, coast guard power boats and battleships will be on view in the harbor that day, while airplanes will encircle the fleet. The drills are to take place in the areaway adjoining the drydock.

Spaces are to be provided for a midway and the various concessions and attractions are to be in the hands of the different state posts.

PUBLIC INSPECTS NEW SHIP

The Merchants & Miners Transportation Company's steamer Chatham, recently launched for the coastwise freight and passenger service, was opened to public inspection from 11 to 3 o'clock today previous to sailing on its inaugural voyage from Boston to Baltimore. The vessel is one of five new steamers which the Merchants & Miners have built to improve the company's coastwise service.

PAGEANT TO BE PRESENTED

SALEM, Mass., June 22 (Special)—Five episodes of Salem's history, from its settlement through the colonial era, will be presented in pageant form in connection with the graduation exercises of the combined grammar schools of the city at the State Armory on Friday night. Practically all the work in connection with the presentation, including the papers to be read, is being done by the children.

Y. M. C. A. SECRETARY RESIGNS

WESTFIELD, Mass., June 22 (Special)—Edgar Fielding, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. here since 1919 and physical director for 14 years, has resigned. His successor has not been chosen.

Weymouth to Fete Sesquicentennial

Mayor and Town Clerk From Weymouth, England, Will Be Welcomed by Masons

Percy J. A'Court, Mayor of Weymouth, England, and Percy Smallman, its clerk, who will shortly arrive in the United States for the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the town of Weymouth, Mass., will be the special guests of Maj.-Gen. Henry Knox Lodge, U. D., Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at its seventh communication July 8, in the Armory of the Charlestown Navy Yard. The work of the evening will be the initiation of a class of Entered Apprentices.

Frederic G. Bauer, Worshipful Master of this lodge, the only military Masonic lodge in Massachusetts, is a past Master of Wessagusset Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Weymouth, and is taking an active part in the plans of the town for its celebration. He will assist in welcoming the distinguished visitors from England on behalf of the town of Weymouth and in a fraternal way.

SCOTTISH CLAN PARTY TO SAIL FOR GLASGOW

About 300 members of the Order of the Scottish Clan with their wives and families will sail from Boston July 25 for Glasgow on the Cunard Line steamer Transylvania for a summer excursion to their former homes. The steamer will leave New York July 24 with additional members of the order and the New England party embarking at Boston will be in charge of Alexander Hart, a member of the order and an official of the Cunard Line.

David Lees, past chief of the order, today received an official communication from Mayor Nichols expressing the good wishes of the City of Boston and himself to the hundreds of members and Scotsmen who are making the excursion. Mayor Nichols wished them a "full measure of happiness and safe return."

RADCLIFFE ALUMNÆ DISCUSS POLICIES

Dr. Ada L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe College, and Miss Bernice V. Brown, dean of the college, addressed Radcliffe graduates who are representing the college in various cities of the United States at an all-day meeting in the Irwin Room at the college today.

While no great changes are contemplated for the coming year, college policies and activities were discussed throughout the day, with a view toward strengthening the college and deepening and broadening its work both for students and in the effect of the college on community and national life. Miss Constance H. Hall, of Cambridge, president of the Alumnæ Association, presided. A luncheon was given in Briggs Hall.

REAL NATIONALISM IS UNDER ANALYSIS

Concord Conference Hears Both Sides of Question

CONCORD, Mass., June 22 (Special)—Nationalism cannot be stated abstractly to be either good or evil, said Prof. Karl Schmidt of Boston University, in addressing the Concord Conference of the New England Fellowship of Youth for Peace today at Trinity Parish House.

"The question, 'Is Nationalism a Virtue?' cannot be answered yes or no without consideration of all the conditions in each given case," he said.

Prof. O. B. Gerig of Simmons College, spoke on "Economic Imperialism." He sketched briefly, but extensively, the influence of commerce, industry and banking on international affairs, particularly upon the national integrity of smaller states. He recommended to the conference widespread study of all implications of economic imperialism and to make a determined stand against it.

Peace reigns again in this little New England town where the Peace Conference was rudely interrupted on Sunday night. At last night's meeting representatives of various local civic and military organizations apologized, and following last night's meeting a number of the young men who had taken part in the disturbance of the preceding evening were guests of the fellowship at an informal dance held in Trinity Parish House.

LIVING COSTS PUT IN WOMEN'S HANDS

League of Voters' Speaker Tells of Power

Women have the power to lower living costs when excess prices are due to sharp trade practice, Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin of Washington, chairman of the living costs committee of the National League of Women Voters, told members of the Massachusetts League at a luncheon in her honor at the Women's City Club of Boston, yesterday.

"Housekeeping has new values when one approaches it with intelligence and definite knowledge and appreciation of conditions," she said. "The vital need of women is to understand the determining factors in costs of necessities. There is nothing vague in the effect of the tariff to a woman who goes to market to buy food for her family."

Mrs. Baldwin formerly was with the United States Department of Agriculture as a milk utilization expert, and in three years traveled in virtually every State, conducting milk campaigns.

She was educated in the public schools of Arlington, Mass., her birthplace, and in 1918 was graduated from Teachers' College, Columbia University. She takes an active part in women's activities in Washington. She was president of the College Women's Club until it merged with the Association of University Women.

BERKSHIRE COUNTY RAISES PUBLICITY FUND

PITTSFIELD, Mass., June 22 (Special)—Excellent progress is being made in the drive for funds instituted by the Berkshire Hills Conference for the purpose of giving publicity to Berkshire County. This city has closed its campaign with $1500 subscribed in excess of its quota. Already nearly $9000 in cash is in hand, with $800 coming in within a few days. North Adams will make a start this week in raising its $8790 quota, and Lenox and Stockbridge also will get into the game in earnest. It is believed that the drive throughout the county will be virtually completed by the end of this week.

Trade Board Plans to Unify Sizes of Women's Clothes

Difference in Various Models Often Presents Problem of Proper Fitting—Question Is to Be Taken Up With Manufacturers Supplying Retail Stores

Standardization, already so successful in many lines of endeavor, is to be applied to the manufacture of garments, by the department stores of Boston, through the retail trade board of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. This does not apply to styles or colors, so that feminine buyers cannot complain of seeing too many similar garments being worn. But it does apply to sizes.

Under present conditions, the specified size of a garment varies with the different manufacturers, partly through incorrect labeling. Thus a "perfect 36" might fit at one store and fall far short of it at the next, although the same buyer be involved.

Department stores find the fitting problem to be increasing and a group of the largest department and speciality stores in Boston has launched a campaign against the incorrect sizing of garments by manufacturers, according to the Retail Trade Board, under whose auspices the campaign is to be waged. Sizes of garments are to be tested by the stores on model forms before the goods are put into stock, beginning with July 1. The plan will be started with dresses but is expected to be spread out later to other wearing apparel.

The few stores that have been using such a plan individually are to join the others, including the largest department stores in the city, in furthering the plan through the board. The stores are now notifying the manufacturers from whom they buy of the plan. When a store finds a garment incorrectly labeled as to size, the retailer notifies the manager of the Retail Trade Board. When three such complaints accumulate against any one manufacturer, the board calls the manufacturer's attention to the situation, with a view of correcting the labeling.

Standardization of model forms becomes the next problem and the merchants of Boston agree that the solution lies in deciding upon what the size and dimensions of a garment shall be, if it is to be marked a 36 or a 38. Under such a plan, it is pointed out, all manufacturers and retailers will be in accord as regards how each size should measure and fit. Pending establishment of such standards, however, Boston merchants have decided to adopt a given type of forms for testing garments in all the stores participating in the movement, notifying the manufacturers that the proper sizing of garments would be judged in accordance with how the garments fit the forms selected.

At a recent meeting of the merchants, it was pointed out that the incorrect sizing problem had reached a stage where customers often show a lack of confidence in the sizes and blame the retailer. Consequently concerted action is deemed essential to solve the sizing problem.

WOMEN THRONG ARENA AT CATHOLIC CONGRESS

By the Associated Press

CHICAGO, June 22—The greatest assemblage of women ever gathered within one inclosure in America banked the stands in Soldiers Field today at the second public session of the International Eucharistic Congress. It was Women's Day—and the vast arena harbored less than 5000 men in the 180,000 worshipers. A women's choir of 15,000, including 5000 hooded nuns, chanted the "Missa Rosa Mystica," the famous mass of Vito Carnevali.

One large section of the stand was filled with nuns, whose black veils and white capes were in striking contrast to the sea of red, green, blue, gray and tan hats of lay women.

The first address was by the Archbishop of Vienna, Cardinal Frederick Piffl, who spoke in German.

Pierce Butler, associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, who received an enthusiastic ovation, emphasized the importance of religious training as a factor in the moral development of democratic institutions. Justice Butler interrupted his address for the entrance of the cardinals, led by John Cardinal Bonzano, the papal legate. He resumed after Cardinal O'Connell of Boston had taken his seat as presiding officer.

Archbishop Edward J. Hanna of San Francisco preached the sermon. He described the assemblage as the greatest honor to womankind in history.

OLD NEWPORT FORT GOING UNDER HAMMER

WASHINGTON, June 21 (AP)—The Fort Greene military reservation, Newport, R. I., will be sold by the War Department at public auction on July 22. The city of Newport advised the war department of its desire to purchase the reservation but failed to exercise its option within the six months' period allowed by law.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE INCREASES SALARIES

Also Establishes Several New Ranking Positions

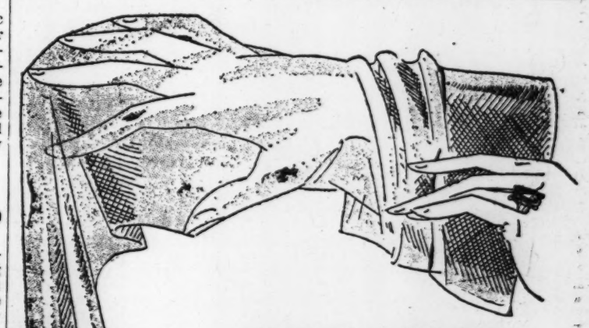
Several salary increases were made by the Boston School Committee last evening, some new ranks established, and their salaries fixed. An adviser in high schools was authorized, with a minimum salary of $2208 and annual increments of $96 until a maximum of $3648 is reached. The rank of adviser of women at Teachers College was established, with a minimum salary of $2496, increasing by annual increments of $96 to a maximum of $3936. The office of director of speech improvement was established, with a minimum salary of $2640, and annual increases of $120 to a maximum of $4080.

In the department of school hygiene the minimum salary of sanitary inspector was fixed at $1728, increasing with annual increments of $96, to a maximum of $2112. A sliding scale for supervising school physicians was fixed from $1800, with annual increments of $120, to $2040. School physicians in the certificating office were given an increase fixing $1592 as the minimum and $1800 as the maximum.

The minimum salary of the supervisor of nurses was established at $2040, with annual increments of $120, until the maximum of $3000 is reached. The supervising nurses were raised to $1824 as a minimum, with annual increments of $96, to a maximum of $2208. School nurses had their minimums fixed at $1824 and their maximum at $1920. School nurses in certificating offices were granted a maximum of $2112.

The salary of assistant director in the division of educational investigation and measurement, established at the last meeting, was placed at a minimum of $2400, with annual increments of $120, to a maximum of $3480.

Rebecca Anslow was appointed principal of the summer session of the Trade School for Girls, and Henry C. Short principal of Mechanic Arts Evening School.



Century Brand
Silk Stockings

A Wonderful Value

Silk stockings is the only vogue that fashion never changes, and are adding a great deal to the appearance of every woman and miss. Even royalty notes the smart appearance of the women of America, made doubly impressive with the beautiful, lustrous silk stockings which they wear.

You have your choice of Chiffon silk—with lisle lined garter, top and sole.

Pure dye silk—with lisle top and sole.

Of great importance is the fact that our color line is always complete. Plenty of fashionable white, and new Summer shades.

OVERSEAS TRADE CONTINUES GOOD

Both Imports and Exports Show Increase With Far East

Special from Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 21—Although April exports to the Orient were $11,000,000 greater in April, the last month of record, than in April a year ago, a decline of more than $15,000,000 from the preceding month was noted.

The combined export and import trade of the United States with the Far East for April, 1926, amounted to $203,354,000, a gain of $48,642,000 over the $154,712,000 total of April a year ago, according to the Far Eastern Division of the Department of Commerce. Exports increased by $11,327,000, while imports advanced by $37,315,000, the totals for the two periods being, respectively, $100,755,000 and $138,070,000.

All of the important countries, except Australia and New Zealand, took greater amounts of American products in April than in the same month of 1925. China, New Zealand and Australia fell behind as sources of our imports, but the other countries increased their shipments to us from 33 per cent in the case of India to 110 per cent for British Malaysia.

Increased purchases of American automobiles, machinery, iron and steel and other staples accounted for heavier exports to the Dutch East Indies during April. Return sales of Dutch East Indies products to the United States, however, dropped from $16,772,000 to $11,488,000, smaller rubber shipments accounting for $4,400,000 of that loss.

Lighter exports of lumber, machinery, and petroleum to Japan contributed to outbalance the value of increased shipments of American iron and steel and raw cotton at slightly lower prices, and reduced Japan's share in this country's exports. In contrast, Japan's contribution to the United States April imports exceeded the March record, an advance due largely to larger raw silk sales.

Australia decreased her purchases of American automotive products in April, but retained leadership among the passenger car markets of this country, although dropping to second place as a market for American trucks. An additional loss in shipments of iron and steel to Australia also tended to counterbalance increases in exports of refined mineral oils, lumber and machinery.

In China's case the situation was reversed. With quieter political conditions, American exports rose, while United States imports of Chinese products dropped.

The Philippines not only consumed more American manufactured goods, especially cotton cloth, during April, but supplied the United States with larger quantities of sugar, hemp and coconut products.

PROHIBITION PARTY REVIVAL PLANNED

Election Campaign Proposed in Every State

NEW YORK, June 22 (AP)—A movement to revive the Prohibition Party in every state in the Union will be launched on Thursday, when the party holds a state convention here to place a complete state ticket in the field for the elections this fall, according to D. Leigh Colvin, national chairman of the party.

The gubernatorial nominee probably will be Edward G. Dietrich of Syracuse, president of the Wesleyan Methodist Church in the United States. Mr. Colvin predicts that the Prohibitionists will undoubtedly support also the candidacy of Franklin W. Cristman, Independent Republican, for United States Senator.

"The present attacks on the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act," said Mr. Colvin, discussing the coming convention, "makes rehabilitation of th Prohibition Party in every state an urgent necessity, which I plan to emphasize strongly at our unofficial convention."

On the other hand, W. H. Stayton, chairman of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, who has just returned from a western tour, said similar groups have been organized in Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri, Montana, Colorado and Nevada, under the auspices of his association. In Wisconsin, Montana, Illinois and Colorado, he said, plans have been made to insure at the coming elections prohibition referenda similar to the one to be voted on in New York State next fall.

SHRINERS TO PRESENT HISTORICAL PAGEANT

For 15 nights, from July 8 to 24, Boston and New England will be treated to an elaborate outdoor spectacle. It will be called "America" and staged under the auspices of the Aleppo Temple, Ancinent Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Braves Field. As it is a celebration of the sesquicentennial date of the Revolution, interesting incidents from revolutionary times will be among the many numbers on the lengthy program each night. The Boston Tea Party, Paul Revere's Ride, the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown and the crossing of the Delaware by Washington and his troops are only some of the episodes to be presented.

A scenic setting, 600 feet long and 40 feet high, will form the background for the spectacle "America," while three giant stages, supporting an assemblage of hippodrome and circus features comprising 1000 persons promises a performance of color, action and thrills. While the fireworks are a feature in themselves and form the background, many other special entertainment acts hold prominent places on the various bills. Arrangements have been made with the Steinert Music Company at 162 Boylston Street, down town, to care for all Nobles and others who desire tickets.

DORCHESTER Y. M. C. A. BUILDING PLANNED

Announcement of $400,000 Unit at Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Boston Young Men's Christian Association and that of the board of directors and board of management of the association, yesterday included the election of Arthur S. Johnson as president for the thirtieth year, and the announcement of a $400,000 Y. M. C. A. project in Dorchester.

At the meeting of the association W. Irving Bullard, William C. Chick, H. Bradley Fenno and Arthur Perry Jr., were elected to the board of directors for the term ending in June 1930, and to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Donald P. Hood. Robert T. P. Storer was elected to the board also for the term ending in 1930. At this meeting Ernest Lovering, secretary-treasurer, made a report showing that the expenditures for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1926, were $1,189,949, and the budget for the year now begun calls for $1,265,623.

Announcement was made of taking the initial step for securing a fund of $400,000 for building equipment in the area served by the Dorchester Community Branch. This included announcement of a condition gift of $100,000 toward this fund, dependent upon securing the balance of $300,000.

It was reported that a survey made during the past three years clearly indicates that there are eight areas of Boston proper where need is shown for building equipment. Adequately to meet these needs it was reported that the situation calls for the erection of 11 Y. M. C. A. buildings, with additions to four others.

At the meeting of the directors, officers of the association were reelected. Mr. Johnson has served as president since 1897. Others reelected include Albert H. Curtis, first vice-president; William C. Chick, second vice-president; Francis P. Luce, recording secretary; Ernest Lovering, secretary-treasurer; Wilman E. Adams, general secretary.

TWO TRAFFIC CLUBS WILL VISIT BOSTON

Study of Port Facilities Is to Be Made

Plans for inspecting the ocean terminals and shipping facilities of the port of Boston by about 250 members of the Traffic Club of Springfield and the Worcester Traffic Association on next Tuesday were announced today by the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. The traffic men will be the guests of the association, and the tour of the harbor will be on the City of Boston steamer, Michael J. Perkins.

Starting at 10 a. m. from the west side of Commonwealth Pier, the party will skirt the Atlantic Avenue and Charlestown wharves and make a stop at the navy yard especially to visit the historic frigate Constitution. Rear-Admiral Philip Andrews, commandant of the First Naval District, and his staff, will formally receive the traffic men as the navy yard band participates in the reception.

From the navy yard the party will proceed up the Mystic River and view the industrial development in that vicinity, including the Mystic Iron Works, the new Wiggin Lumber Terminal and the Ford Building. Returning along the East Boston water front, the party will inspect the airport at Jefferies Point, after which the city fireboat will give a display of water spirals prior to landing at the army base, where dinner will be served the party aboard the Dollar Line steamer, President Polk. It is expected that addresses will be made at the dinner by William M. Butler, United States Senator from Massachusetts; Governor Fuller; Channing H. Cox, formerly Governor of Massachusetts; Mayor Nichols, and W. W. Lufkin, collector of customs.

RUSSIAN TRADE SHOWS GROWTH

Special from Monitor Bureau

NEW YORK, June 21—The growth of Soviet Russia's governmental policies with regard to trade, including the return to a modified and controlled state capitalism and the simultaneous rise of imports and exports to about 71 per cent of the prewar figures, are set forth in a comprehensive survey of the operations of the Soviet economic system since 1917 by Savel Zimand on a commission for the Foreign Policy Association, made public here today by its research department.

While the report has been kept purely factual, and as such has not drawn conclusions, it shows, according to a statement accompanying it given by Prof. James H. McDonald, chairman of the association, that the effort Lenine and Trotzky were formerly making to wipe out the capitalist system has been replaced by the present effort of Trotzky and his colleagues "to reconstruct and develop industry, agriculture and commerce along largely capitalistic lines."

The survey, according to Dr. McDonald, was made largely to help satisfy the demands of many American business men who are directly concerned with the revival of Russian trade. Dr. McDonald, in concluding his statement, said:

Soviet Economic Recovery

"The growth and security of Russia's foreign trade depends on the rapidity of her economic recovery. It is commonplace to emphasize the importance of the recovery of Russia as a factor in the recovery of Germany and all of Europe. Though the United States' foreign trade with Russia directly may never reach high percentages, Russia's return to normal would so stimulate European trade as to favorably affect American exports.

"From the end of 1922," the report said, "private trade not only maintained its position, but encroached upon co-operative business and even upon that of the State. During 1923 private capital made its way into wholesale trade and by 1924 private traders were progressively supplanting both the state and co-operative trading bodies. Statistical information of commercial establishments compiled by the Central Statistical Department at the close of 1923 gives the number of state commercial undertakings for 1922-23 as 11,915 (2.6 per cent of the total number of undertakings); the number of co-operative undertakings as 27,678 (6.1 per cent of the total number of undertakings) and the number of private commercial undertakings as 420,366 (91.3 per cent of the total).

From the second half of 1923 the figures of the Central Statistical Department covering various regions of the Soviet Union showed that everywhere private undertakings constituted nine-tenths of the total. In the towns 94 per cent of the commercial undertakings were owned by private capital.

Private Establishments Small

The private establishments, however, the report explains, were generally much smaller than the governmental, so that 84.1 per cent. of the workers were in governmental establishments, as against 12.4 per cent in private and 3.5 per cent. in co-operative.

A regular program of concessions to foreign companies has been carried on, according to the survey, as a means of attracting foreign capital. A total of 226 concessions were reported on Jan. 1, 1926, Germany, Great Britain and the United States, in the order named, being the countries whose nationals have been most active.

Trade Returns Slower

Russia's foreign trade is represented as returning slowly to the pre-war level, though still far beneath the goal. In 1913 the imports in rubles were 1,364,034,000 and the exports 1,520,133,000, and in the year 1924-25, after both figures had grown extensively since 1922, the imports had reached only 718,800,000 rubles and the exports 567,600,000.

The relations between Russia and the United States are represented as showing a marked increase in trade in recent years. Important contacts have been made between Russian and American commercial and financial institutions, the survey said, and "in the last year the trade with Russia by American manufacturers and exporters has reached a volume which in money value is more than twice what it was before the war and revolution. In the course of the last 12 months American export trade with Russia doubled. Although no United States commercial attaches or consuls are at the service of American exporters in the Russian trade area, four official trading companies are operating in the United States, some of them under the State laws, and the Russian State Bank and Russian Foreign Trade Bank are represented by some of the leading American banking institutions."

FARMERS' BLOC, BROOKHART PLEA

Majority in Both Houses Is Declared Essential to Agricultural Relief

STORM LAKE, Ia., June 22 (AP)—Smith W. Brookhart, Republican senatorial nominee, told a gathering of farmers here that agriculture will have no opportunity in Congress until it elects a majority in both houses that will fight to a finish what he described as a "conspiracy of special interests."

"Agriculture," Mr. Brookhart said, "has perhaps passed its most critical stage in American history. The Haugen bill faces defeat. This defeat has been brought about by a gigantic conspiracy of special interests against the basic industry of our country.

"These interests have devised a scheme of economy which denounces everything as economically unsound, unless it promotes their special welfare. Because of their size and prestige, they are able to control the views of statesmen and dictate the action of the United States Government.

"If any one proposes to do the same thing for agriculture that has been done for the railroads, for credit system, for the protected industries, for the industries based upon patents, or for public utilities, he is denounced as a radical or a dangerous man imbued with Socialistic tendencies.

"It is the settled belief of all the farm organizations and all of the labor organizations that ultimate relief from the intolerable oppression of great and unlawful combinations of wealth is to be found in co-operative organizations which should be assisted in the first instance by the Government as it has assisted other enterprises and especially by the governmental exportation corporation.

"The opposing interests are careful to avoid a clash with this idea as a whole and instead they pick out one element of co-operative organization, to wit, limitation upon the earnings of capital and denounce that as Socialistic."

KUNO FRANCKE GROUP GAVE MUSEUM PIECES

Announcement was made today that the three pieces of German sculpture recently unveiled at the Harvard Germanic Museum were the gifts of the Kuno Francke Jubilee-Germanic Museum Committee to which German-Americans throughout the United States contributed, and not the German Social-Scientific Society of New York, as was previously given out through a mistake.

Otto Spengler, secretary of the general committee, in explaining the situation, said that the gifts were improperly marked in the museum, but that the correct designations are being prepared. He said that while the New York society was instrumental in starting the movement to obtain funds for the gifts, German-Americans in all parts of the country cooperated in the undertaking to honor Dr. Francke, the Harvard curator, in this manner.

LEGION OFFERS COMMUNITY AID

War Veterans Adopt Program of Constructive Scope for Summer

Special from Monitor Bureau

CHICAGO, June 22—National headquarters of the American Legion is sending to every post in the Nation announcement of a community betterment campaign, which it has designated as "one of the most important works of the Legion for the early summer."

A comprehensive campaign of publicity, under guidance of the Legion's National Americanism Commission, of which Frank Clay Cross, of Indianapolis, is director, is to be conducted on a nation-wide scope, and the Community Betterment Bureau at the Legion's national headquarters is to aid, having co-operative relations with virtually every service organization and welfare agency in this country.

"There are many indications of a growing realization that community service is the most far-reaching of all programs on the Legion calendar," said Mr. Cross. "The day has arrived when every post must have a definite community program if it is to 'keep in step with the Legion.'"

To Adopt "Iowa Plan"

The so-called Iowa plan is to be used as a national project to ascertain activities that the majority of the community prefer the Legion to conduct, it was stated. Citizens are to be asked to decide upon the most vital community project for the war veterans to undertake. Coupons are to appear in newspapers and when expressions of opinion have been analyzed, the Legion Post in the area surveyed will start the desired activity. It is the plan that was operated in Iowa and which has been demonstrated to be so effective that the national headquarters has decided toi put it into nation-wide operation.

Reviewing some community betterment work that already has been accomplished by the American Legion, Mr. Cross pointed out that posts which have added to the knowledge and happiness of their neighborhoods by Chautauqua and lyceum courses "are too numerous to mention."

Of significance is activity of men in various rural and small town posts in betterment of local educational facilities. Moffat County Post in Craig, Colo., raised $916 to finance completion of a school term after the regular funds had been exhausted.

"Rural education should be one of the first concerns of every rural post," Mr. Cross wrote in a message to posts.

Other opportunities to help have included aid for a hall of fame in Duluth, Minn., a zoo in Ogden, Utah, and community buildings and playgrounds in a score of cities. In Las Vegas some Legion men explored ancient pueblo ruins of the Moapa Valley.

Some of the activities have become standardized, such as the junior all-American Baseball League, cooperation with the Boy Scouts of America, the national essay contest and the school award.

To eliminate need of a trained social worker to analyze a local situation and recommend a needed project to be carried out by the Legion, national headquarters has announced this plan by which the community is to select the service most desired.

DRY ISSUE CHANGES MISSOURI CAMPAIGN

Senatorial Candidates Define Prohibition Views

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 22 (Special) — The Missouri campaign for the United States Senate is undergoing fresh changes having relation to the prohibition issue. Maj. Harry B. Hawes (D.), at present a member of Congress from the Eleventh District, has made a statement in which he declares against the Eighteenth Amendment, adding that it cannot be repealed and that modification is necessary. His plan is called by the Rev. Parker Shields, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in Missouri, an "anæsthetic that will not put either side to sleep."

The Democratic line-up at present consists of one wet candidate and two decided drys.

On the Republican side, George H. Williams, the incumbent, has announced that he will open his campaign at his old home in California, Mo., June 26, on which occasion he will announce his platform in which he will give prohibition "its proper place." This statement is not accepted as promising by the Anti-Saloon League, which has changed in its attitude of friendship for David M. Proctor of Kansas City to one of active indorsement. The Republican senatorial candidates number one dry and two wets.

CANADA MUST APPROVE PACTS

Country Cannot Be Involved in War Without Calling of Parliament

OTTAWA, June 22 (Special)—Canada has an informal sanction through its Parliament of the system of treaty-making as recommended by the Imperial Conference of 1923. It has declared itself also as being opposed to its ministers committing it to any treaty or convention without the approval of Parliament. A resolution embodying both these matters was moved yesterday in the House of Commons by W. L. Mackenzie King, the Prime Minister in his capacity of Secretary of State for External Affairs, and carried without division after considerable discussion.

The conference had recommended that no treaty should be negotiated by any of the governments of the empire without due consideration of its possible effects on other parts or on the empire as a whole; and that the part affected should have ample opportunity of expressing its views and taking part in the negotiations.

Bilateral Treaties

Bilateral treaties, imposing obligations on one or more parts of the empire, should be signed by plenipotentiaries of the part or parts affected: and that treaties negotiated at international conferences should be signed, as is the present practice, by plenipotentiaries on behalf of all the governments of the empire and with full powers, in the form employed at Paris and Washington.

In regard to the ratification of treaties, the conference recommended that it should be effected only at the instance of the government or governments affected, and with or without parliamentary approval, as each government should decide.

Mr. King's resolution, after quoting the above details, declared its approval of the "procedure proposed for the negotiation, signature and ratification of treaties and conventions, and considers further that before His Majesty's Canadian ministers advise ratification of a treaty or convention affecting Canada, or signify acceptance of any treaty, convention or agreement involving military or economic sanctions, the approval of the Parliament of Canada should be secured."

Various Treaties Cited

Canada has been following this procedure in recent years, said Mr. King, as instanced by the halibut treaty, the commercial treaty with Belgium, and the treaties with the United States in regard to the suppression of smuggling and traffic in narcotics.

He thought that making the approval of Parliament obligatory would help to avoid dissensions and difficulties and make for greater unity and security within the empire. "We stand first, last and all the time for the supremacy of Parliament," he declared, "and this resolution will make it clear to the people of Canada that Parliament will be called and its approval given before this country goes to war."

This matter had been brought up at the present time because another imperial conference had been called in London in October and it was desirable that Canada's representatives should know exactly where they stood.

The Liberals declared themselves as being whole-heartedly in favor of the resolution and as utterly averse to Canada being placed in a position where it would involuntarily become involved in difficulties arising out of matters with which it had no concern.

L. S. R. Morin, member for St. Hyacinthe-Rouville, Quebec, said that Canada had refused to adhere to the Geneva protocol on account of the military commitments and hoped that it would reject the Locarno treaty. A number of Progressives also spoke to the same effect, while the Conservatives kept silent.

When he reached the Pyramids and was hoisted to a camel by an exceedingly picturesque Arab, he quivered with delight. But he had a rude awakening.

"What's your camel's name?" he asked the Arab.

Air Traffic Notes

London, June 4
From Monitor Bureau

THE regulations for the British light airplane meeting at Lympne in September have been issued. The course for the competition for two-seater light airplanes will be of about 2000 miles and will take the form of flights to Brighton, Eastbourne, Hastings, Dover, Ramsgate, Margate, Herne Bay and Croydon. The Daily Mail is presenting prizes amounting to £5000.

The French light airplane events, which will be international, take place from a Paris airdome from Aug. 9 to 15. After eliminating tests, the competition is divided into tests for altitude, landing, taking off, dismantling and erecting, and speed. Prizes total 145,000 francs.

The Soviet Government has now received its report on the 1924-25 aerial survey expeditions of Nova Zembla. Many old map errors have been corrected and a new island discovered. This is the first recorded occasion of the discovery of an island from the air.

Aviation in Jugoslavia is progressing apace. Its Aero Club has now over 10,000 members and has branches in most of the big towns. The first air line is to be one between Belgrade and Ljubljana via Zaghreb.

Australia gives a good example of the superiority of air travel over other means of transport. A traveler can do the journey by air from Charleville to Longreach in Queensland in four hours for £8 10s., as against 5½ days for £11 10s by car. The distance is about 400 miles. There are other journeys, showing a fair saving of money and a very great saving in time.

A business man in London carried out a record trip recently. He had to attend a meeting in Nuremberg on important business in the afternoon and also one in London at 9 a. m. the following morning. Leaving Croydon at 6 a. m. he reached Nuremberg at 1:50 p. m. and returned to Croydon by 9:30 the same evening.

The starting point of the French air line to Ajaccio in Corsica has been transferred from Antibes to Marseilles. Later on an extension of the line to Tunis is contemplated.

The Aero Club of France is organizing a competition for multi-engined transport seaplanes to be held in the St. Raphael-Frejus area between July 17 and Aug. 7. The planes will have to be equipped with at least two engines and carry fuel for a 500-kilometer flight. After eliminating tests the competition will consist of flights of 187 kilometers on four consecutive days.

The town of Marseilles is spending several million francs on an aerodrome and the Havre municipality is putting forward a similar scheme. These are with a view to extending air services to inland towns.

The extent to which flying is progressing in Germany can be judged from the summer program of the Deutsche Lufthansa, which will operate no fewer than 39 air services this summer. This number can be increased when the negotiations with Paris go through. Ten of the lines work from Berlin.

It is now possible to leave Berlin at 2 a. m. and to reach Moscow the same afternoon, with intermediate landings at Danzig, Königsberg, Kovno and Smolensk.

The Polish Air League is making great efforts to popularize flying in Poland. An aero-dynamic institute at Warsaw is nearly completed, and schools for pilots and mechanics have been started. Engineers have also been sent abroad to learn aircraft construction.

The Soviet Government is organizing a series of long-distance flights both in Europe and the Near East. Only Soviet-built machines and engines will be used. An air service is also proposed between Tiflis and Tabriz, reducing the journey from one of four or five days to five hours.

A seaplane service covering the 430 miles between Stockholm and Stettin is now being operated by Sweden. The normal time taken is about five hours.

NEW COLLEGE GYMNASIUM

RICHMOND, Va., June 17 (Special Correspondence) — Resolutions to provide $100,000 for the erection of a new gymnasium at Randolph-Macon College, at Ashland, Va., have been passed by the Richmond District Methodist Conference in Corinth Church, Sandston.

SENATE HONORS MR. LA FOLLETTE

Friends and Opponents Laud Progressive Leader in Memorial Tribute

Special from Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 22—Fourteen senators from all parties and factions, among their number men who had been leaders in the Opposition, joined in extolling the public service of the late Robert M. La Follette (R.), Senator from Wisconsin, at a special memorial service in the Senate Chamber.

Vice-President Charles G. Dawes, presiding when the session opened, shortly thereafter called to the chair the son of the Progressive leader, who occupies his seat in the Senate. The youthful Senator presided over the three-hour session, recognizing as they rose the speakers, many of whom had served for a decade and more with his father and engaged with and against him in historic legislative conflicts.

In the senatorial gallery, reserved on this occasion for members and relatives of the family, were two daughters of the late Senator, Mrs. Fola Middleton and Mrs. Mary Zucher. Mrs. La Follette did not attend.

Great Crowd Attends

Long before the opening hour for the memorial, the galleries and corridors were filled to capacity. Long lines waited at the numerous doors for admission. Not even during the most important events of this session of Congress, the vote on the World Court resolution, or the ratification of the Italian debt settlement, had such crowds been present. Among the throng were to be seen officers and enlisted men of the army, navy and marine crops. Many Negroes also were present.

Irvine L. Lenroot (R.), Senator from Wisconsin, who until 1918 had been a close political associate of Senator La Follette, was the first speaker. He reviewed Senator La Follette's life and told of his courage and determination in the face of defeat.

"Although we parted in the last few years," Mr. Lenroot said, "no Senator ever failed to recognize his great ability, his devotion, his vast courage. His was a beautiful character, as evidenced by his wonderful home life, warm with love and kindliness."

Praise From an Opponent

Following Mr. Lenroot, Joseph T. Robinson (D.), Senator from Arkansas, Democratic floor leader, related episodes of Senator La Follette's service in the Senate, speaking particularly of his indomitable courage. "If he believed he was right he was prepared to stand and fight alone against any odds," Mr. Robinson declared.

In closing, George W. Norris (R.), Senator from Nebraska, Senator La Follette's closest factional friend in the Senate, recited a few stanzas from Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac," in which the doughty warrior hails the joy of standing alone and unshackled for one's beliefs:

"Give no share to Cæsar . . .
"And though I stand not high, it may be,
"Yet I stand alone. . . ."

"He often stood alone and fought alone for what he thought and we have since found to have been right," Mr. Norris said. "He was the bravest of the brave and the most sincere of the sincere."

DENMARK REVIEWS ITS FOREIGN DEBTS

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, June 4 (Special Correspondence)—The Official Statistics Department has been able to prepare a survey of Denmark's indebtedness abroad. The aggregate indebtedness amounts to 1,640,000,000 kroner, compared with 2,045,000,000 kroner at the end of 1924. On the other hand, Denmark's credits abroad have receded from 770,000,000 kroner to 640,000,000 kroner, so Denmark's net indebtedness to foreign countries now amounts to 1,000,000,000 kroner in round numbers, compared with 1,275,000,000 kroner a year previously. If the two sums, however, are reduced to gold kroner the indebtedness, instead of having decreased, is actually 90,000,000 gold kroner larger.

The different heads on Denmark's debit side consist of State debentures or bonds, 455,000,000 kroner; municipal debentures, 315,000,000 kroner; the Hypothek Bank bonds, 45,000,000 kroner; other bonds and shares 260,000,0000 kroner, and business debits 565,000,000 kroner.

March
established a new record in General Motors' History

-but April beat March

-and now May has beaten April

-141,651 cars

The experience of the last ten years indicates that April is the record month in retail automobile sales; and that May's sales should be only about 70% of April's.

When, therefore, the retail sales of General Motors cars in April of this year reached the unprecedented total of 136,643 cars, it was reasonable to assume that this would be the high mark, and that May would show a smaller total.

But May, instead of registering a decline, leaped ahead of April with sales to the public of 141,651 cars.

What do these mounting records indicate?

FIRST, that general business conditions are fundamentally sound. The increases in General Motors' sales are not sectional, nor limited to certain territories. They are nation-wide; indeed, world-wide.

SECOND, a growing public recognition of these four General Motors principles: (1) Quality first and foremost. (2) The economies of a big organization passed on to the purchaser. (3) Low finance charges and fair terms. (4) Performance, appearance, comfort and safety, combined to give maximum value in each price class.

WEST PREPARING TO GIVE EDITORS HAPPY GREETING

California State and Local Governments Keen for National Association Meet

LOS ANGELES, June 14 (Staff Correspondence)—Elaborate plans are being made by state and local governments, as well as civic and commercial organizations for the entertainment of the National Editorial Association which meets in Los Angeles from June 30 to July 2, bringing hundreds of editors and other newspaper workers from all parts of the country.

Many of the visitors will remain until July 15 to make the state tour which is one of the important social features of the convention, and which will include visits to the orange groves, the moving picture studios of Hollywood, the beach and mountain resorts and other places of interest from Mexico to the northern line.

The California Legislature has adopted a resolution extending a welcome to the editors, and Friend W. Richardson, Governor, has issued a proclamation conveying similar expressions, while municipal, town and county officials also have added to the state-wide greeting.

The visitors will be entertained at breakfast on June 28 at El Centro and in succession will follow a trip through Carriso Gorge in Mexico, entertainment at San Diego, a day in Orange County among the orange groves, three days of convention sessions in Los Angeles, with visits to Hollywood, Catalina Island, and the "Orange Empire" surrounding Riverside.

An afternoon and evening spent at Santa Barbara will be followed by a night trip into northern California, where a new series of entertainments will await the delegates, beginning with breakfast at Monterey. A visit to Carmel-by-the-Sea, the Redwoods and the Santa Clara Valley will be followed by days in and about San Francisco, which, in addition to trips to the Bay cities, will include the ascent of Mt. Tamalpais, with its unsurpassed views of the bay region, and a glimpse of the sequoias of Muir woods.

Further land and water trips in the vicinity of San Francisco will bring the convention to an official close after a trip to Stanford University at Palo Alto.

The keynote of the meeting has already been struck by Governor Richardson in his greeting, in which he says:

"Liberty in America is guarded by the country newspapers as represented by the National Editorial Association. In order that this liberty may be perpetuated, the taint of yellow journalism must be avoided. Truth in the news column as well as in the advertising column is necessary to hold the confidence of the people in the press of the land."

NOVA SCOTIA SENDS OUT DEMONSTRATION TRAIN

HALIFAX, N. S., June 18 (Special Correspondence)—With the co-operation of the Canadian National Railways, which provided the full train equipment, the Department of Natural Resources of Nova Scotia is sending throughout the length and breadth of the entire Province a demonstration train for agricultural education during the summer. There are five cars in the train, one containing the exhibit of three grades of dairy cows from the Federal Government experimental farms; various grades of hens, swine and other animals; cars with various kinds of feeds and seeds, dairy products, different classes and grades of salt.

One car is exclusively devoted to the work of women's institutes in the communities; child's welfare work, relative values of foods. The train is attracting widespread attention, people motoring long distances to the various railway stations at which it is stopped, and listening by hours to the various lectures which are being given.

TRIPS TO PHILIPPINES BIENNIALLY APPROVED

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP)—The Wainwright bill for a congressional board of visitors to inspect and report to Congress upon the government and conditions in the Philippine Islands has been passed by the House and sent to the Senate.

The board would make trips to the Philippines every two years to gather information. It would be composed of three senators and five House members.

BRITISH FARMS USE MORE POWER

Special from Monitor Bureau

LONDON, June 4—The Ministry of Transport has recently issued its annual statistical returns indicating the number of tractor licenses issued in connection with machines used for agricultural purposes. These figures show that during the year ended Nov. 30 last, 14,526 tractors were being used for farm work in England alone.

In February, 1925, the Ministry in an official statement announced that only 12,126 tractors were then being employed for agricultural work in England. Thus during the nine months' period from February to November, 1925, the use of tractors on English farms increased to the extent of nearly 20 per cent.

Less Arable Land

The increase indicated by these statistics is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that in recent years the area of arable land in England has steadily decreased. Hitherto the tractor has mainly been regarded as suitable for tillage operations, but there is every reason to believe that these machines are becoming more widely used by grassland farmers.

To a very large extent the increase in the numbers of tractors maintained for agricultural work can be explained by the wider use to which these machines are now being put in Great Britain. Farmers who have large acres of grassland are finding the tractors a valuable power-unit for mole-draining, mowing and loading the hay crop. Moreover on arable farms the tractor is no longer regarded merely as a power-unit for plowing, but it is being utilized for cultivating, disc-harrowing, rolling, and harvesting. In addition, it supplies the farmer with a convenient form of power for such belt work as threshing, wood-sawing and the driving of barn machinery.

More Machinery Needed

The statistics issued by the Ministry of Transport, however, indicate that there is still considerable scope for the wider adoption of power farming methods in Great Britain. The returns show that at the present time there is one tractor in use for every 675 acres of arable land. In this connection, the statement is frequently made that the farming of 100 acres of arable land justifies the use of a tractor.

The extent to which the tractor is being used at the present time varies considerably in different districts. The returns show that in Middlesex these machines are more intensively used than in any other district. In this county there is one machine to every 310 acres of arable land. It is a somewhat significant fact that throughout the home counties, power farming methods have been adopted to a greater extent than in any other area in Great Britain.

Another interesting feature revealed by the official figures is that in such counties as Bedfordshire and Essex, where heavy soils predominate, the tractor is steadily becoming more popular.

WOMEN DEMAND EMANCIPATION

Rumanian Council Includes All Classes, All Races and All Creeds

BUCHAREST, May 8 (Special Correspondence)—"Until the social and political emancipation of her women is an established fact—and not merely a theory—the new Rumania cannot expect to take her rightful place among the progressive nations of the world," is the statement made recently by Princess Alexandrina G. Cantacuzino, vice-president of the International Council of Women, president of the Petite Entente Féminine (comprising Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Poland, Rumania, and Jugoslavia), and president of the Rumanian National Council.

The Rumanian National Council of Women was founded four years ago, and has become one of the first really national organizations helping toward the development of the new Rumania. This council now includes 38 different women's organizations, representing all classes, races, and creeds that make up Rumania's 17,000,000 population.

Incidentally, Princess Cantacuzino admits a deep sense of gratitude to the United States, where she visited last year on the occasion of the International Congress of Women in Washington, and where she learned much about the activities of women in the national life of the country. The knowledge there gained is now being usefully employed in directing the organization of a women's movement that seems destined in time to be a vital force, not only in the affairs of her own country, but throughout the Balkans. Ably co-operating with Princess Cantacuzino in this work are Mlle. Cerkez, who was with the Princess in the United States; Mme. Ramniceanu, and Mrs. Ethel Greening Pantazzi, Canadian authoress and wife of Commander Pantazzi of the Rumanian Navy.

A considerable amount of diplomacy and tact has been needed to induce the leaders of women's organizations in the new provinces—particularly Transylvania and Bessarabia—to join a national movement. They are whole-heartedly suspicious of movements with a political tinge that reach out from Bucharest. In the case of the women's movement, however, the so-called minority organizations were first invited to bring before the National Council any specific complaints or grievances they had against Rumanian public bodies which it was properly within the scope of a National Council of Women to take up, and among which questions affecting the welfare of women and children were prominent.

A particularly sore point between the leaders of the women's movement and the Rumanian Government is the question of the right of women to vote. The Constitution for Greater Rumania passed by the Legislature in 1923 provides for universal adult suffrage, with women having identical rights with men.

While the leaders of the movement are thoroughly alive to the power of the vote, they are not so keenly attracted toward politics at this stage as to lose sight of the fact that a considerable amount of educational and organization work still needs to be done to fit the women of the country for complete political freedom. It is toward this goal, in fact, that the principal activities of the National Council are at present directed. There is a vast field in Rumania for a strong, energetic women's movement, and its leaders are astute enough to realize that social and economic advancement should precede political. There are already enough citizens of Rumania who have the right to vote, but do not know how to exercise it.

DANES PLANTING ON SAND DUNES

Government Aims to Establish Belt of Forest Land Along West Coast

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, June 6 (Special Correspondence)—Denmark has during a protracted period been engaged in transforming the sand-dunes (the Klitter) along the west coast of Jutland into plantations, and there are now some 30 plantations, with an aggregate area of about 32,000 hectares, of which 25,000 hectares have been planted upon, and an area of 3000 hectares do for various reasons not lend themselves to plantation.

The total area of sand dunes and adjoining moorland in Denmark amounts to about 90,000 hectares. The end in view was to create a strip or belt of forest and thicket along as much of the west coast as possible. Much has been done, and more will be done, and the flight of the sand has been got under. The new sand dune inspector, Vilhelm Pinholt, who is a member of the Folketing, has already for a considerable time been connected with this protective work, and he will, among other tasks, pay special attention to the renewal of the oldest plantations.

Mention of the Jutland sand dunes was first made during the reign of King Christian III, when the inhabitants of the district in question were forbidden to graze their cattle on the dunes so as not to destroy what natural vegetation there might be.

It was, however, not till the beginning of the nineteenth century that planting began on the dunes, compulsory work by the people of the districts, but it did not amount to much. A decided move, however, was made in the fifties, and the Legislature passed the necessary act. A fresh act was passed in 1867, and since then the work has been steadily proceeded with along almost the whole of the west coast of Jutland.

FREE LEGAL AID IN S. AUSTRALIA

Labor Government Puts Into Force Several Socialist Measures

ADELAIDE, S. Aust., May 17 (Special Correspondence)—Although all the promises of Socialistic legislation made by the Labor Government when it entered office have not been fulfilled, owing to the hostile forces of public opinion, the Gunn Ministry has succeeded in introducing several unusual features which come within the category of state enterprises. These have been severely criticized by the Liberal Opposition, but the Government is persisting in their operation.

A state insurance department has been created, despite the fact that a bill introduced into Parliament for this purpose was thrown out by the Upper House, or Legislative Council. Now the Government has extended the functions of the State Bank (established to assist citizens to build homes, and farmers to get advances) to include general banking. A manager is being appointed at a salary of about £2500 per annum.

The policy of building cheap homes for the poorer classes is being expanded, although here, again, considerable opposition is being shown by those who are strongly of opinion that the taxpayers will be called upon to meet substantial losses, probably to the extent of more than £300,000. These figures are challenged by the Minister for Housing, William J. Denny, who claims that mass home building by the state is a sound proposition, and that the Government intends to go right ahead with it. Additional areas of land are being purchased in various parts of the metropolitan area, and the objective is to erect 5000 houses during the term of the present Labor Ministry, whose three years of office will expire during the early part of next year. Those homes will provide accommodation for at least 25,000 people. The value of each house is about £700, and anybody who can tender a deposit of £25 may apply for one. Most liberal installments for repayment are arranged, and there is a keen demand as every group of homes becomes available.

Another enterprise of a Socialistic character has just been adopted. This is the appointment of a public solicitor under legislation passed last session. He will give free legal assistance to persons of limited means, and will undertake for them all civil and matrimonial causes. The public solicitor will also defend any accused person considered by a judge to be entitled to the concession. A capable young lawyer, C. A. Sandery, LL. B., has been selected for the duties. He is 27 years of age, and was a country lad.

As a means of prison reform, the Government is releasing progressively a number of offenders who are likely to become good citizens again under a system of probation. Clergymen have been appointed as officers to undertake surveillance, and although the Government is being subjected to much criticism on the ground that the procedure is risky, no capitulation from the stand taken up is likely.

A LITTLE girl of five had won the admiration of a man who was spending his furlough in her home city. Arriving at the cricket field in the park one Saturday afternoon with a box of chocolates for the child, he was more than delighted to watch her as she passed in and out among the onlookers inviting them to partake of her candies until not one remained for herself.

Needless to say, more than one box of candies was placed in her hands after this incident, and a rare attachment resulted between the man and the generous child. When the time drew nigh for him to sail away to the Malay Peninsula, he expressed regret many times that his small chum could not accompany him.

The day of his departure arrived and he was expected to take lunch at the child's home. Most of the forenoon was spent by her in washing and ironing the clothes of Bluebell, her largest and favorite doll. The mother thought that the extra preparations were being made in honor of the presence of their guest at lunch, and great was the surprise of all when she proceeded to pack this large doll in a box to accompany her friend on his journey.

Tears filled his eyes as he graciously accepted the cumbersome parcel containing the child's most treasured possession. And away he went in a motorcar to the boat with Bluebell, leaving a small child very happy that now her friend's long trip "would not be a lonely one."

DESPITE a high sea, a party of four set forth on an all-day trip in a small motorboat. The little boat weathered the waves valiantly for some time, but after land was almost out of sight, the boat began to swing in circles. An investigation showed that the rudder had dropped off. Attempts were made to steer the boat with an oar, but the high seas kept it in the trough of the waves and made headway impossible.

After some time, another small boat was sighted and signaled. Five fishermen with a large catch were returning home after a hard day's work, but they gladly threw the party a rope and towed the rudderless craft ashore. The difficulty of towing a boat which could not be kept in line with its leader delayed the fishermen in reaching the harbor, but they stayed to help the party land.

Since it was a holiday, a new rudder could not be obtained until the following day. The group therefore made plans to return to their homes by train, coming back the next day to repair the boat. When they were ready to go, the fishermen extended to them the hospitality of a near-by yacht club to which they belonged whenever the group might be in the vicinity, and not only did they refuse to take any pay for their services, but they tried to force upon the four a generous portion of their catch.

The following day when the party returned to beach the boat preparatory to putting on the new rudder, one of the fishermen came down to the shore to lend assistance. He spent some time in selecting the best place to work on the boat and assisted in hauling it up on land. All offers of money were firmly refused and even expressions of gratitude were cut off with, "Oh, we fellows are always glad to help."

LOS ANGELES BANK BUYS OUT ANOTHER

LOS ANGELES, June 16 (Staff Correspondence)—Controlling interests in the National City Bank of Los Angeles have passed to the California Bank here, it has been announced by the presidents of both organizations. Each will continue to operate separately.

Resources of the two banks will total approximately $105,000,000, and their deposits approximately $98,000,000. The California Bank, which operates under a state charter, has 40 branches in southern California, and controls the California Trust Company and the California Security Company.

BRITISH CLOSE PRIVATE SCHOOL

Equipment Is Inadequate, With 1 Teacher for 20 Children, 4 to 13 Years Old

Special from Monitor Bureau

LONDON, June 7—A legal case has just been decided in Manchester which affords an example of the attitude of English educationists toward schools which are run for private profit and which are therefore outside the state and municipal school system. Legal proceedings were taken against 15 parents by the director of education for Manchester for having "habitually and without reasonable excuse neglected to provide efficient elementary instruction" for their children, aged between 5 and 14. The court ordered the parents to choose suitable schools for their children within a fortnight.

It might appear from this that private schools are illegal. But that is far from being the case. Parents may send their children to any school or to none, provided that they can prove that their children are receiving education of a reasonable standard. What decided the judgment of the court in this case was the unsuitability of the premises and equipment in which the school was conducted, and the inadequacy of the staff and equipment.

The school was examined very carefully by three inspectors employed by the Manchester Education Authority, and they found the following conditions existing. There were no proper desks, except for four of the children. The furniture consisted of ordinary forms with "lath" backs, and it was while sitting on these forms that the children received their education. When they had to do any writing—excepting the four children—they had either to kneel on the floor and put their school books on their knees, or bend down and put their books on the form. There was no opportunity to do ink work, all the writing was done in lead pencil or slate pencil; there was no apparatus for teaching children—no blackboard or any of the things usually associated with schools and no instructional pictures, neither was there any playground.

So far as reading was concerned, the only books available for the children on one occasion were some antiquated spelling books and one copy of Tennyson's "Lady Clara," Vere de Vere which was passed from hand to hand by the children who were reading it. In both that book and the spelling book the print was small. All the children were taught in one room by one teacher.

"It must be obvious," said the advocate, "that, however competent, the teacher is not in a position to teach simultaneously 18 to 20 children whose ages range from 4 to 13," and it is for these reasons that the school has been judged inefficient. Needless to say, there are many private schools in existence in which the conditions are quite sound; and these, with the full countenance of the authorities, form a useful, though unofficial part of the educational facilities of the country.

JERUSALEM FORBIDS BEGGING PRACTICE

Tourists Protected Also From Traders' Importunities

JERUSALEM, May 27 (Special Correspondence) — Satisfaction has hailed here the publication of a Government order prohibiting all forms of begging. Henceforth soliciting "baksheesh" (gifts) for undesired services, street peddling and mendicancy, will be considered in Jerusalem a misdemeanor punishable by law.

The Government was compelled to take rigorous action following complaints on the spread of this public nuisance, tourists and pilgrims to the Holy City suffering from it most. It had always been the intention of the British authorities to stamp out begging as far as possible, although it was to be expected to exist in a city that is visited by some 15,000 persons during the tourist season.

Guides and shopkeepers in Jerusalem are also forbidden to invite tourists or visitors to engage their services or enter their shops, unless "a previous inclination has been expressed" by the newcomers. It has long been the custom of these shopkeepers and guides to declare their services or wares superior to those of their colleagues. By creating this species of competition, disaffection would sometimes arise among the rival dragomans or traders, and not infrequently an innocent visitor was made the center of a commotion. Now, however, the evil has been removed, and sight-seeing may be done in future in Jerusalem with the tranquillity needed for instructive contemplation of historic sites.

EXPLORER DISCREDITS TRAFFIC IN ARCTIC

OSLO, June 1 (Special Correspondence)—In a recent lecture on the problems of Arctic exploration in the future Prof. Fridtjof Nansen, the eminent Norwegian statesman and Arctic explorer, pointed out that the airship offers the greatest possibilities for exploration in Arctic regions.

The professor did not, however, believe in the supposition maintained by several explorers that future communication between east and west will take place by way of the North Pole. He regards it as a circuitous route, and is inclined to believe that traffic in future will follow other directions.

ELKS OF NATION PREPARING TO DEDICATE NEW MEMORIAL

$3,500,000 National Headquarters in Chicago Will Be Scene of Impressive Ceremonies During Week of Annual Convention

Special from Monitor Bureau

CHICAGO, June 22—To the list of the West's notable edifices has been added the $3,500,000 Elks' National Memorial Headquarters in Chicago, which will be dedicated during the week of July 12-18, when a great throng from among the 900,000 members of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks meet here in annual convention.

This marble memorial to members of the organization who served during the World War is to be the new national headquarters. Each Elk contributed his bit. It is located opposite the northwest corner of spacious Lincoln Park, about three miles north of the principal down-town business district.

Out of many designs submitted, that of Egerton Swartwout, New York architect, was selected. Raised considerably above the boulevard, this circular building presents an imposing exterior of white marble with a sculptured frieze encircling the base of the colonnade. Life-size figures sculptured in high relief symbolize ideals of the Elks, and important passages in the order's history.

There are lawns and terraces and interior courts. A high-arched doorway opens into a great circular lobby and the effect of spaciousness is improved by glimpsing long vistas of corridors opening off this lobby on axes that radiate from the center of the circle.

From the entrance hall a winding staircase reaches to Memorial Hall, on a level with the outer colonnade. This vast circular room is 75 feet in diameter and rises 70 feet to the top of the dome.

Col. John Hollis Wells of New York was advisory architect with Mr. Swartwout. James Fraser and Adolph Weinman, both of New York City, were sculptors, while the mural paintings were by Eugene Savage and Edwin H. Blashfield, both of New York.

Mr. Swartwout, who designed the National Victory Memorial at Washington wrote recently of this edifice: "I might say it was classic, and more Roman than Greek; I would prefer to say it was modern, and that it was American. It is certainly modern in its conception, and while it is classic, it is not archæological. It follows along the lines of that adaptation of the classic which got such a noble start in this country just after the Revolution; the style used in the Capitol and other buildings in Washington. It is our national heritage."

The building is 233 feet on the front from wing to wing and about 100 feet deep. The corner stone was laid June 7, 1924.

JUGOSLAVIA RAISES FEMINIST QUESTION

Member of Clericals Upholds Equal Rights for Women

BELGRADE, Jugoslavia, June 1 (Special Correspondence)—Recently the representative of the Slovenian Clerical Party, Dr. Hochnec, moved the question in support of women's rights in Jugoslavia.

The occasion was a lecture given by him to the Women's Club on "The Principles of the Solution of the Women's Question." In his lecture he announced in the name of his party that he stands for the equalization of women with men before the law. He called to mind the work of the women during the war, and read a declaration of President Wilson setting forth arguments for the rights of American women.

Dr. Hochnec applied the same arguments to the case of Jugoslav women. 'Real progress and happiness," he concluded, "will come to the Jugoslav people when their women participate in public and political life."

The women's question, therefore, stands as follows in Parliament. Three large opposition parties, the Democrats, the Independent Democrats and the Slovenian Clericals, have announced themselves in support of women's franchise. The two great parties at present in the Government, the Radicals and the Raditch Party, have not yet declared themselves. At present it is not possible to foretell what attitude the Radicals will take toward the question, but as regards the Raditch Party, it is very probable that it will declare itself for women's rights if the problem comes up definitely for solution in the near future.

SYDNEY ENJOYS LOW CAB FARES

Competition Causes Cut in Rates, With Prospects of Lower Prices

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 16 (Special Correspondence)—This city is now experiencing the benefits of cheap cab service. It has needed them for many years. The success of the Yellow Cab Company led to the development of the Black and White and the Checkered, and now the Blue and Green are announced. The vehicles of the first three are seen everywhere, and the others are due any time. The Yellow, which is the most important one at present operating, and has many more cabs than the other companies, has met the competition with a cut in rates. The minimum fare will now be 1s., and there is a promise that it will go lower.

The Presbyterian Church, through its Ladies' College, has established a branch on the mountains, where a certain number of teachers will always be in residence. A class will proceed from the city to the mountains every week, and stay a week. During that period a committee of the class will conduct the establishment, the teachers taking no part in the control. Should this system prove the success anticipated, doubtless other schools will establish country places, and permit the scholars to hold the reins of government at them.

The Murray River, with its tributaries, runs through four states. It has its rise in Queensland, proceeds through New South Wales—first as the Darling and then the Murray—on through Victoria and South Australia to the sea. The land for most of the 1500 miles is rich alluvial, stretching back from the river for many miles.

There are a few irrigation settlements on the river, the principal being in Victoria and South Australia; now great works are proceeding in New South Wales with the object of impounding enough water to irrigate enormous areas of land. The irrigated areas along the Murray will grow all sorts of citrus fruits, grapes of all kinds, including those for raisins, sultanas, and currants, cotton, lucerne—alfalfa—and other crops.

It is calculated that when the Murray is fully equipped with weirs and the incidentals thereof, the whole valley will carry a population double that of the entire Commonwealth, which has now only 6,000,000 residents.

CHINESE MIGRATING TO NORTH MANCHURIA

TOKYO, May 26 (Special Correspondence)—Tides of Chinese immigrants are pouring into the fertile but sparsely settled districts around Tsitsihar in North Manchuria as a result of the building of the Taonan-Angangchi railway line for Chinese interests by the Japanese.

The line, which stops just short of Tsitsihar, and so avoids an open clash between Russian and Japanese interests, will be completed in June. The country which it taps is a rich agricultural district, but at present has a population of only 10 to the square mile, due to its inaccessibility prior to the construction of the new railway.

LONDON INN BECOMES NEW POLICE STATION

Special from Monitor Bureau

LONDON, June 7—On the site of the old Saracen's Head, one of the most famous coaching inns of London, and familiar to readers of Dickens, the new Snow Hill police station which, when completed, will be one of the best equipped in London, will be erected. The Lord Mayor, Sir William Pryke, laid the foundation stone in the presence of a large number of members of the City Corporation and police officials.

The chairman of the ceremony, J. J. Redding, referring to the historical location of the new building, said that, according to report, Charles V was a guest at the Saracen's Head in 1522 and Stow referred to it as a "fair and large inn" in his Survey of London. The back of the new building will be in Cock Lane, famous for its medieval "ghost."

BULGARIA WORKING FOR PROHIBITION

BULGARIA, June 1 (Special Correspondence)—The Ministry of Education has recently issued a circular letter of instructions to all the directors of state schools, pointing out the evil effects of indulgence in alcoholic liquors. The foundation of many evil habits, it has always caused physical and moral decadence, the letter points out. The realization of these facts in this country, as in more cultured countries, has appealed to social workers, who have undertaken a struggle against the alcohol habit.

The Ministry concludes the circular by announcing that the Union of Temperance Societies in Bulgaria has decided to carry out a series of prohibition rallies this month, and teachers are urged to accord their full sympathy to the movement. In particular, they are asked to aid in the work of giving prohibition lectures and talks.

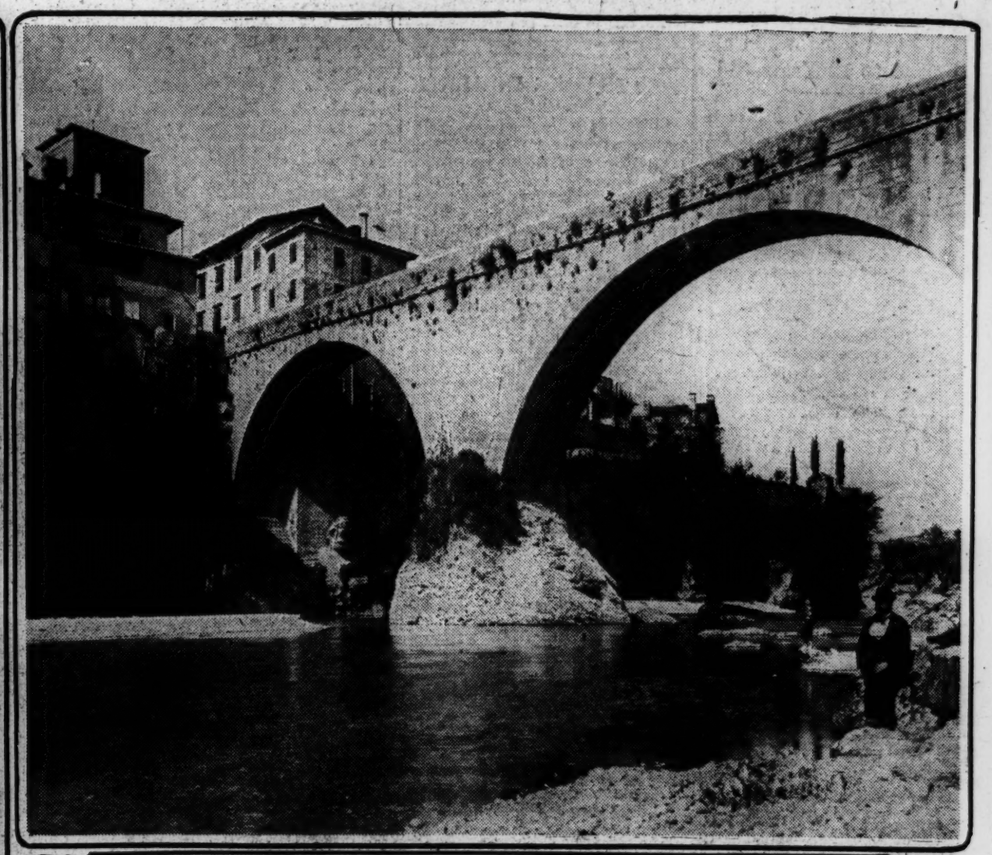
School Days in Jugoslavia—Unchanging Boats of the Nile—Wedding in Bulgaria

¶"And shining morning face, creeping like snail unwillingly to school," says Shakespeare. But today's schools are made so attractive that the reverse of what the Avon bard said is true. Witness this group in Agram, Jugoslavia, bound for the temple of learning.



¶"The Devils Bridge," over the Natisone River at Cividale, Italy, is no less picturesque than the quaint old town which possesses some Roman remains and archeological museum.

Model 31 Four-Door Sedan
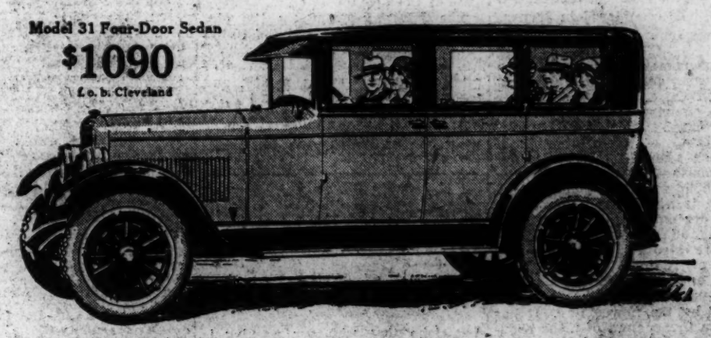
f. o. b. Cleveland



BY simply going over the measurements of the new Cleveland Six—and checking the size of everything of importance—you'll understand in a twinkling why this great Six is able to outride and outclimb and outlast other cars of similar prices.

Take the new Model 31 Sedan, at only $1090, plus freight and tax. This model's rich body is big and roomy and beautifully proportioned—with 51-inch rear springs and an all-over spring-base of 168 inches. This extra length means extra riding ease.

The car's big, powerful motor has an extra-large crankshaft, with bearings from 2 5/16 to 2 3/8 inches in diameter. Valve rollers are a full inch in diameter. A brilliant, brawny powerplant, with full high-pressure lubrication! And with all these advantages it has the paramount advantage of the "One Shot" System of centralized chassis lubrication.

Go over this great Six point by point. We'll leave it entirely to your own good judgment.

A New Canaan and Its Joshua

PERIODIC excursions into that region which may be almost terra incognito to all but a few specialists—American literature of the seventeenth century—have always convinced me of a well-nigh unsuspected riches that lie invitingly on the surface. I am not a specialist in this pleasant field, but someone should make himself the chronicler of these briefly or only obscurely recorded worthies who for the most part quite unwittingly made the first literature on American soil. So I venture to set forth the claims of one Thomas Morton, to be called the Joshua of a New Canaan.

How shall we introduce him by the orthodox method of proceeding from the known to the unknown? For a goodly number of readers doubtless his name will seem dimly familiar from their memories of a most diverting and circumstantial account of the settlement of "Merry Mount," penned by no less a personage than William Bradford in his priceless record of New England, "The History of Plymouth Plantation." For the year 1628 Bradford relates how "Aboute some 3. or 4. years before this time, ther came over one Captaine Wolastone, (a man of pretie parts,) and with him 3. or 4. more of some eminencie, who brought with them a great many servants, with provissions & other impliments for to begine a plantation; and pitched them selves in a place within the Massachusets, which they called, after their Captains name, Mount Wollaston. Amongst whom was one Mr. Morton, who, it should seeme, had some small adventure (of his owne or other mens) amongst them."

In the spacious narrative which follows (as not a few loyal New Englanders will recall) the scandalized Bradford tells how on the departure of Captain Wollaston for Virginia, Morton and his followers proceeded to set up a Maypole and by reason of the quite unpuritan gayety of their behavior "they chainged allso the name of their place, and in stead of calling it Mounte Wollaston, they call it Merie-mounte, as if this joylity would have lasted ever." Of the propriety of the new appellation—whatever the propriety of their conduct—we can have little doubt. Says Bradford, "Morton became lord of misrule" (in traditional merry England fashion); "they danced and frisked together . . . as if they had anew revived & celebrated the feasts of the Roman Goddes Flora." So, apparently, the alleged "revels" continued in the midst of the sober Puritans, but according to our excellent historian "after Morton was sent for England, (as follows to be declared,) shortly after came over that worth gentiman, Mr. John Indecott, who brought over a patent under the broad seall, for the governmente of the Massachusets, who visiting those parts caused that Maypolle to be cutt downe, and rebuked them for their profannes, and admonished them to looke ther should be better walking."

An extraordinary glimpse is this of an anti-Puritan relapse into the cherished institutions of joyous recreation which had held sway for centuries in old England and which for the first time are set up in the American wilderness! So appealing an incident it is and so picturesque the arch-rebel that Motley in "Merry Mount" and Hawthorne in "The May-Pole of Merry Mount" have woven novel and tale about them.

These reminders, I hope, are adequate introduction to Thomas Morton and his New World Maypole. But he has quite independent claims to fame in the form of his own version of the foregoing events. For he is the author of a novel work entitled "The New English Canaan, or New Canaan," thus divided and summarized: "The first Booke setting forth the originall of the Natives, their Manners and Customes, together with their tractable Nature . . . towards the English. The second Booke setting forth the naturall Indowments of the Country, and what staple Commodities it yealdeth. The third Booke setting forth, what people are planted there, their prosperity, what remarkable accidents have happened since the first planting of it, together with their Tenents and practise of their Church." One commentator has asserted that the third book—because of its historical character, I suppose—is 'the most interesting. Yet, it is the first two which I find most attractive, since in them I discover the first beautiful descriptions of this "New Canaan." With that engaging style characteristic of his time he details the circumstances of his venture across the sea. "In the Moneth of June, Anno Salutis 1622, it was my chaunce to arrive in the parts of New England with 30. Servants, and provision of all sorts fit for a plantation: and whiles our howses were building, I did indeavour to take a survey of the Country: The more I looked, the more I liked it."

Being thus more fortunate in the season of the year than were the intrepid voyagers on the Mayflower two years earlier, he sees our New England at her best. So he is able in the following rhapsodic description to offer this tribute: "When I had more seriously considered of the bewty of the place, with all her faire indowments, I did not thinke that in all the knowne world it could be paralel'd. for so many goodly groves of trees, dainty fine round rising hillucks, delicate faire large plaines, sweete cristall fountaines, and cleare running streames that twine in fine meanders through the meads, making so sweete a murmering noise to heare as would even lull the sences with delight a sleepe, so pleasantly doe they glide upon the pebble stones, jetting most jocundly where they doe meete and hand in hand runne downe to Neptunes Court, to pay the yearely tribute which they owe to him as soveraigne Lord of all the springs. Contained within the volume of the Land, Fowles in abundance, Fish in multitude; and discovered, besides, Millions of Turtledoves one the greene boughes, which sate pecking of the full ripe pleasant grapes that were supported by the lusty trees, whose fruitfull loade did cause the armes to bend: which here and there dispersed, you might see Lillies and the Daphnean-tree." The enthusiasm which inspires such impressions leads him to conclude that these surpassing qualities "made the Land to mee seeme paradice: for in mine eie t'was Natures Masterpeece; Her cheifest Magazine of all where lives her store: if this Land be not rich, then is the whole world poore." Hence it is that the only adequate comparison of this land is "a parallel with the Israelites, Canaan."

For the numerous and detailed narrative charms of his book I must refer the reader to the volume itself, which can be found in an edition prepared some forty years ago by Charles Francis Adams Jr. for the Prince Society, and which as I have already intimated deserves a far wider renown. In the three "bookes" besides many a quaint description of "Canaan" one may find such accounts as "Of Thomas Morton's Entertainement at Plimmouth, and Castinge Away Upon an Island," "Of a Great Monster Supposed to be at Mare Mount; and the Preparation Made to Destroy It," and "How the Worthies Put Mine Hoste of Mare Mount into the Inchaunted Castle at Plimmouth." The latter chapter headings refer to a "monster" who is Morton himself and the "inchaunted castle" (as may be surmised) is a waggish euphemism for the rude jail. These titles alone will allure the reader; they also show forth a man of culture and vivacious literary imagination. One will not read far, moreover, to discover in him our first American satirist: throughout his account Miles Standish is "Captain Shrimp," Governor Winthrop "Joshua Temperwell," and other personages are always "Bubble" and "Eacus."

Four times at least did this irrepressible gentleman-adventurer cross the Atlantic between old England and "New Canaan." Almost unique in the early history of the first Massachusetts colonies for his adherence to the Established Church, he carried back unfavorable reports of the austerity and intolerance of the Puritans, while always respecting to the full those motives which had instigated their settlements over the sea. A Cavalier he was of the better type, possessing liberal culture and the liberal ideas of an English gentleman. To call him a Joshua may appear a fantastic misapplication of epithets. Yet no one else in those stirring days of struggle to settle the New World so fully repeats the rôle played by the hero of Israel who went to spy out the land and heartened his people by glowing descriptions of its wonders and by his challenge that they should "go up and possess it." To the Puritans New England was a place of refuge, "a stern and rock-bound coast" in a stern world. To Thomas Morton it was veritably a New Canaan, "Natures Masterpeece," which he wished to share with his fellow countrymen. He declared, "Posterity will taste the sweetness of it, and that very sodainly." P. K.

Caravans

Great, grey caravans moving in the night, full of sullen mystery, laden down with heavy things;
crowding through the darkness as they push on toward the light:
great, grey caravans, on great, grey wings.

Swift, silent caravans smashing through the night,
plunging over trackless wastes, wastes where trails never meet, spraying noiseless gravel as they crowd on out of sight:
swift silent caravans on swift silent feet.

Soft, slow caravans swaying through the night, tinkling bells and padded feet, and spices that the traders bought, easing through the moonlight, over sands dull white:
soft, slow caravans of soft, slow thought.

—Hal Borland, in The Bookman.

Pictured Sunlight

IT IS gratifying to note that pictorial photography is more and more recognized the world over as the youngest member in the family of fine arts. And it may well be so, if one realizes that not the medium through which the artist expresses himself is the measure of æsthetic value, but the adaptability of that medium to convey to others the artist's fondness for and concept of beauty. This inspiration, so essential in the origination of objects of charm, can as well, and in some instances better so, be expressed through photography as it can through other processes. Sunlight, for instance, that is, the impression of sunlight either reflected on walls or through the atmosphere of clouds, can be caught in photography remarkably well. Proof of this fact is the print, "The Window's Pattern," by J. Vanderpant, in which the simple shape of a window, reflected in an architectural surrounding of marble, makes a strong print of pleasant composition and full of the atmosphere of light and the reflection thereof. It may be stated that "The Window's Pattern" was bought by the Art Museum of San Francisco as part of its permanent collection of pictorial photography.

The Window's Pattern — Photograph by Vanderpant.

Railway Junctions

There is very little difference between places, after all; the true difference is between the people who regard them. . . . To the poet, all places are poetical; to the adventurous, all places are teeming with adventure. . . .

So, at least, it seems to me; for not otherwise can I explain the fact that, like my beloved R. L. S., I have always enjoyed waiting at railway junctions. I love not merely the marching phrases, but also the commas and the semicolons of a journey—those mystic moments when "we look before and after" and need not "pine for what is not." I have never done much waiting in America, which is in the main a country of express trains, that hurl their lighted windows through the night . . . but there is scarcely a country of Europe except Russia whose railway junctions are unknown to me. In many of these little nameless places I have experienced memorable hours; and . . . I have always wanted to praise them, in print. . . .

There is a junction in Bavaria whose name I have forgotten; but it is very near to Rothenburg, the most picturesquely mediæval of all German cities. It consists merely of a station and two interesting tracks. When you enter the station, you observe what seems to be a lunch-counter; but if you step up to it and innocently order food, a buxom girl informs you that no food is ever served there—and then everybody laughs. This pleasant cachin-nation attracts your attention to the assembled company. It consists of several peasants, in their native costumes (which any painter would be willing to journey many miles to see), who are enjoying the delicious experience of travel. They are great travellers, these peasants. Once a month they take the train to Rothenburg, and once a month they journey home again, to talk of the experience for thirty days. All of them have heard of Nuremberg (which is actually less than a hundred miles away. . . .) They would like to see it some day—as I should like to see the Taj Mahal—but meanwhile they content themselves with the great adventure of going to Rothenburg. . . . In the very midst of these congregated travellers, I casually set down a suit-case which was plastered over with many labels from many lands; and this suit-case affected them as I might be affected by a messenger from Mars. They spelled out many unfamiliar languages; and a murmur of amazement swept through the entire company when one of them discovered that that suit-case had been to Morocco. . . . Then another of these travellers—an old man with a face like one of Albrecht Dürer's drawings—discovered a label that read "Venezia." "Is that," he said, "Venedig?" with a little gasp. "Yes, Venedig," I responded, "where the streets are water." Slowly he removed his hat. . . .

Again, in northern France, it was merely by some accident of changing trains that I discovered the lovely little town of Dol. . . . It was a little picture-book of a place, with many toy-like mediæval houses clustered side by side around a market place where peasants twisted the tails of cows. I strolled to the cathedral,—and found myself mysteriously in England. It was a manly Norman edifice, sane and reticent and strong, set in a veritable English green, with little houses round about, reminding one of Salisbury. I entered the cathedral; and found the nave to be composed in what is called in England the "decorated" style, and the choir to give hints of "perpendicular." And then I remembered, with a start, that the ancestors of all that is most beautiful in England had migrated from Normandy, and that here I was visiting them in their antecedent home. . . .

It was by a similar accident—desiring to transfer myself from Bourges to Auxerre—that I discovered the wonderful junction town of Nevers. . . . It possesses a Gothic cathedral with an apse at either end, that looks as if two churches had collided and telescoped each other. There is also a Romanesque church at Nevers which is just as simple and as manly as either of the famous abbeys in Caen; and a château with rounded towers, which once belonged to Mazarin. . . .

It is difficult for me to remember a railway junction in which there was nothing to do; but perhaps Pyrgos, in Greece, comes nearest to this description. At this point, you change cars on your way from Patras to Olympia. The town is made of mud; that is to say, the single-storied houses are built of unbaked clay. There is nothing to see in Pyrgos. But I amused myself by addressing the inhabitants, in the English language, with an eloquent oration . . . and thereafter I set a hundred of them at the pleasant task of trying to push the train for Olympia on its way to take me to the Hermes of Praxiteles. I knew no word of their language, nor did they of mine; but they understood that that train should be started . . . and finally, when the engine puffed and snorted with a tardily awakened sense of duty, the train was cheered by the entire population as I waved my hand from the rear platform and quoted one of Daniel Webster's perorations.

Is it—I have often wondered—so difficult as people think, to be happy in an hour "spent waiting at a railway junction?"—Clayton Hamilton, in "Wanderings."

History at Hand

Talk about history and about the advantages of reading history—you can if you like to read the very stuff of history in the stones and bricks and roads and lanes around you. . . . For those with the slightest natural inclination towards the study of mankind an inquiry into the history of their environment will provide one of the most absorbing and profitable diversions that can be conceived. Furthermore, that it will . . . cure the common . . . delusion that one's town, district, or suburb is . . . less interesting than, say Canterbury, Warsaw, or Constantinople. Such an inquiry is also far easier than the ordinary run of historical inquiries. The principal materials for it lie at hand; they are heaped up round about in enormous quantities; and indeed you cannot go beyond your front door without directly or indirectly helping the inquiry.—Arnold Bennett, in "Things That Have Interested Me."

I owe so many happy hours to you:
So many joys your pen has given me:
The homelike English rooms I've wandered through,
The hours I've spent in eager ecstasy
With Oliver, old Scrooge and Little Nell
While wandering through London's less-known streets
Completely happy in the gentle spell
The very mention of your name repeats.
I love them all—Micawber, Chuzzlewit,
Miss Betsy Trotwood, David Copperfield;
Beside a blazing log I love to sit
And to their old-time invitation yield.
Dear friends they are, comrades beloved and true,
And all their constant charm I owe to you!

The Woods Around Siena

I was taken, by the American novelist who has so great a knowledge of Italian gardens, to the Villa Gori outside Porta Ovile, whose little white rococo façade on the green hill opposite the station had attracted me, reproachfully, every time I left Siena, and left without having gone up to it.

The house itself is merely like a hundred other eighteenth century Tuscan country houses. But a tunnel of clipped ilexes leads from it to a uniquely perfect open-air theatre, whose stage and orchestra and side scenes of clipped cypress stand out a vivid golden green in the sunshine at the end of that blackness. The theatre is quite small, and the speaking voice carries very easily. But from the solitary cypress projecting obelisk-wise above the stage, a full-fledged nightingale was singing to the blue sky and sunset-flushed cumulus clouds of that wide vault of sky above the low, green Sienese hills.

Besides the theatre, there was likewise cut out of evergreens a fowling place of the usual old Tuscan type, facing the town and its walls and towers. To it led another tunnel of clipped ilex. . . .

Ilex woods have always fascinated me, particularly unmixed ones, since seeing those back of Spoletto, or perhaps even earlier. There is, as with the box of Box Hill, and the yew of Kingly Vale near Chichester, a special attractiveness when trees we associate with gardens, trees which almost trim themselves unaided, are offered as a free and ample gift by some spot still untouched by man. Even with the junipers on the chalk downs, the hornbeam and beech worn down by Apennine sheep and snows into a semblance of hedges, one hovers pleasantly between the idea of forsaken pleasances and the wild . . . woods: one thinks of sylvans, but sylvans like those of marble or old lead.

At Cetinale, some fifteen miles southwest of Siena, all such-hankerings are gratified. The natural ilex woods clipped regularly through centuries for charcoal, whose former ovens make everywhere fantastic soft black circles in the moss and fallen leaves, the ilex woods have there had a steep path or flight of steps (not unlike the ladders of waterfall at the highest points of Roman villas) cut vertically through their thickness, right up from the villa gates and bowling green to a square barrocco building . . . or hermitage at the very top. And through the gentler slopes of the woods run wide roads past forsaken charcoal ovens. . . . Some scant three centuries ago, or even much more recently, these ilex woods around Siena, continuous here and there with the then still-unshorn virgin forests of the Maremma, must have held deer and plentiful wild boar, and an occasional wolf pack. . . .

And now . . . peasants live there, and the ilex woods of Cetinale are left to charcoal-burners, and to such leaf-eared sylvans as we suspect among the rustling foliage on stormy, moonless nights.

Returning from Cetinale, I begged my American friend to halt her car at the foot of some other woods nearer Siena, those of the "Hermitage of the Ilex Woods" ("Romitorio di Lecceto," leccio, an ilex), which I had not seen since coming upon it unexpectedly in 1890. The hermitage is much larger than I had expected, . . . battlemented and towered for defence, among the exquisitely sweet woods of mixed ilex and oaks in young leaf, and scented, at the close of a hot day, with broom and honeysuckle. There is, which I did not remember, a whole cloister-and-porchful of those toy-box and picture-book frescoes which endear the Sienese School; very faded, but letting you guess that the . . . towns were painted pure rose-colour, the seas a delicate pea-green and the people all represented in their teens and dressed, even patriarchs, in the most ravishing finery. . . .

All this was doubtless latent in my thoughts, this wish, now satisfied, for the southwest ilex woods, during those two days last week at Siena. What was uppermost was the sense, which I have had already years before, especially when looking down upon the country from the unfinished cathedral-top, of the perfect appropriateness of a line of Swinburne's: "Siena the bride of Solitude."

Had we approached, as we went away, and as in fact I did twenty-five years ago with my pony, not by the Poggibonsi but by the Radda road from Florence, we should have come suddenly on her slender towers and steep-paved lanes, on the great fountain of Porta Ovile, suddenly after some twenty miles of almost uninterrupted woodland travel through the Chianti region. Even the southwesterly side, leading to Cetinale, though cultivated with corn and vineyard, has but few farmhouses and fewer villages: a pure, empty country beneath the dome of this hill-girt rolling tableland; great oaks along its dry torrent beds, and bounded by those ilex woods; . . . while the southernmost roads traverse that wilderness of white clay hillocks, always in view of the great volcanic cones of the Amiata range.—From "The Golden Keys," by Vernon Lee.

Return of the Chiff-Chaff

On a warm, brilliant morning in late April I paid a visit to a shallow lakelet or pond five or six acres in extent which I had discovered some weeks before hidden in a depression in the land, among luxuriant furze, bramble, and blackthorn bushes. Between the thickets the boggy ground was everywhere covered with great tussocks of last year's . . . marsh grass—a wet, rough, lonely place, where a lover of solitude need have no fear of being intruded on. . . . On arriving at the pond I was surprised and delighted to find half the surface covered with a thick growth of bog-bean just coming into flower. The quaint three-lobed leaves, shaped like a grebe's foot, were still small, and the flower-stocks, thick as corn in a field, were crowned with pyramids of buds, cream and rosy-red like the opening dropwort clusters, and at the lower end of the spikes were the full-grown singular, snow-white, cottony flowers—our strange and beautiful water edelweiss.

A group of ancient, gnarled and twisted alder bushes, with trunks like trees, grew just on the margin of the pond, and by-and-by I found a comfortable arm-chair on the lower stout horizontal branches overhanging the water, and on that seat I rested for a long time, enjoying the sight of that rare unexpected loveliness.

The chiff-chaff, the common warbler of this moorland district, was now abundant, more so than anywhere else in England; two or three were flitting about among the alder leaves within a few feet of my head, and a dozen at least were singing, . . . chiff-chaffing near and far, their notes sounding strangely loud at that still, sequestered spot. . . . I listened to the bird, then let my eyes rest on the expanse of red and cream-coloured spikes before me, then on the masses of flame-yellow furze beyond, then on something else. . . . Surely, I said, this springtime verdure and bloom, this fragrance of the furze, the infinite blue of the heaven, the bell-like double note of this my little feathered neighbor in the alder tree, flitting hither and thither, light and airy himself as a wind-fluttered alder leaf—surely this is enough to fill and to satisfy my heart. . . . Listen to the chiff-chaff ingerminating the familiar unchanging call and message of spring. Do you know that this frail-feathered mite with its short, feeble wings has come back from an immense distance, crossing two continents, crossing mountains, deserts illimitable, and, worst of all, the salt, grey desert of the sea? North and north-east winds and snow and sleet assailed it when, weary with its long journey, it drew near to its bourne. . . . Yet no sooner is it here than . . . it begins to tell aloud the overflowing joy of the resurrection, calling earth to put on her living garment.—W. H. Hudson, in "A Traveller in Little Things."

Glowing Acres

The moon rode high and clear, cutting the dark, distant sea with a wide belt of rippled gold; but the moon looked far and pale; a painted inanimate thing compared with the thousands of living lights that glowed on every branch of every tree. Even the tall autumn flowers had every plant its lantern. The terraces were picked out with light, the outlines of the great house sparkled with blue and green and ruddy lights. Each tree and shrub was heavy with a fruitage of radiant lanterns. They swung fairy-like above the grass. A junk of lanterned lights rode on the moat. The draw-bridge was jeweled with a network of lanterns, each lantern lit.

It was a carnival of colored lights. Half the shops in Britain that stocked Chinese lanterns had been ransacked for these. An army of decorators had hung them up, busy at it from sunset till now. Round paper lanterns, tall cylinders, odd-shaped ones, great and small, alone, festooned, in flower-like groups, bouquets of lanterns—and every lantern lit; solitary lanterns skillfully suspended as if floating in the air, crinkled lanterns, boat-shaped lanterns, smooth lanterns, painted lanterns, tasseled lanterns, fluted lanterns, bell-shaped lanterns—from every point and crevice where string would catch or wire hold, some Chinese lantern swung and glowed; for glowing acres the old place glittered with their light. . . .—Louise Jordan Miln, in "The Feast of Lanterns"

Patience

Written for The Christian Science Monitor

PATIENCE is one of the highest expressions of goodness. It is the result of the spiritual perception that comprehends a difficulty and lovingly helps to remove it. How often have words of kindly encouragement, patiently and wisely spoken, lifted from sad hearts the shadows of sin and suffering, and permeated the whole dark experience with the light of hope! In all nature we find this quality beautifully expressed. The warm sunshine and the soft breezes of spring patiently coax open the delicate, lovely buds; the great trees with outstretched limbs patiently await the coming of the gentle spring rains to bring forth the tender leaves along their stark branches. How patiently the mother bird broods over her nest, feeds the little gaping mouths, and with patience born of confidence encourages each fledgling to try its wings!

The quality of patience is not given only to a few here and there. It is an attribute of God Himself, and is, in reality, possessed by every one of His children in full measure. In Christian Science mortals are learning how to express this quality in the stress and strain of human contacts. This Science removes the fear attendant upon these conditions, and teaches us with patient love to await the result of the working of Truth when applied to any ill of mortal existence. Behind all impatience is fear lest what the material senses behold is true, whether it be sickness, sinful qualities, or inharmonious relations. Spiritual understanding enables one to discern in place of the broken, imperfect pattern of mortal sense, the perfect model of God's creating. Patience is accompanied by tenderness and loving-kindness for all those who are suffering with fear from these false concepts. In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (pp. 365, 366) Mrs. Eddy writes, "The poor suffering heart needs its rightful nutriment, such as peace, patience in tribulation, and a priceless sense of the dear Father's loving-kindness."

The tender heart of the great Master went out to sin-sick and discouraged mortals along his way. And he said, knowing what he had to give them: "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls." Christian Science is showing to each one of these seekers that this "me" to which the Master invited them to come, was not a limited personality, but the Christ-idea which animated him, the most patient one who ever walked the earth. To his disciples, who felt that to forgive seven times was doing much, he said, "I say not unto thee, Until seven times: but, Until seventy times seven"!

Jesus' method of forgiving sin was to apply the truth which destroyed it,—the understanding of man's unity with God and the consequent unreality of any qualities underived from God. He knew that the understanding which his followers were gaining through his words and works would give them the patience to forgive "until seventy times seven." He knew when to rebuke, and when to encourage. To the downtrodden, the sick, and the sinning,—to every false situation possible in human experience,—he spoke the word so wisely that the situation was healed. His patience was born of that wisdom from above which he knew belongs to man as God's image and likeness. With his profound understanding he knew that there was a solution to every problem; and with patient obedience to the Christ-ideal he waited with certainty the outcome, thanking his Father-Mother God that He always heard him, even before the manifestation of healing had come. There was no taint of self-will, self-justification, or self-love to make Jesus impatient. He knew and taught, as Christian Science is teaching today, that the children of the Father reflect only those qualities and powers derived from God. He could feel no impatience, because he knew the allness of God, good, and saw the Father's image despite the débris of mortal sense attempting to hide it.

Thus it becomes possible for us to reflect this divine Mind which Christ Jesus reflected, and thereby to recognize at all times the Christ-ideal. To help the fallen one to rise; to show the weary one the restful Principle of all right activity; to point the discouraged and fearful one to the goal and to the infinite wisdom which enables him to reach it—all this, in patient obedience to the divine Principle of our being, God, we can accomplish. In "The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany" (p. 247) Mrs. Eddy thus writes: "The little that I have accomplished has all been done through love,—self-forgetful, patient, unfaltering tenderness."

Theatrical News of the World

Then—and Now

By J. T. GREIN

London, June 8

A QUARTER of a century ago, Sir William Schwenck Gilbert, the famous alter ego of Sir Arthur Sullivan, in his caustic way said in public: "On our stage there are not 10 actors who could speak 30 lines without a flaw." It was a sweeping indictment, but there was more than a grain of truth in it. True, England had its masters of diction; the Irvings, the Trees, the Bancrofts, the Kendals, but the rank and file were but poor elocutionists. On the one hand, there was the sonorous old school of pompous declamation; on the other, the lackadaisical young generation that indulged in flabby parlance, regardless of the right of existence of every word.

Then, when the power and importance of the producers grew under the ægis of the new drama heralded by Ibsen; when young Granville Barker came to the fore in his delivery which astounded the hearer, not only by its perfect clarity, but by its simple naturalness, and anon impressed his hall-mark on his productions, a gradual change took place. Artificiality and declamation gave way to realism. Conversation was no longer stressed by affection, emotion sought more sincere utterance than vociferation, restraint made effective by inwardness, by husbanded feelings, was cultivated by the player and fostered by the playwrights—such as Shaw and Galsworthy, who wrote their dialogue in the simple words of every-day parlance.

Today it is generally acknowledged the actors of the English stage are second to none and there are signs that ere long the same may be said of the actresses, although among them there are still too many who indulge in colorless delivery and "refeened" intonations. True, there is still room for improvement among the younger actors, particularly in the vocalization of the King's English. Cockney accents are rare, if not extinct, but all too often the neo-Georgian—which is a modern affectation—plays ducks and drakes with the vowels O an A. Occasionally we hear an actor speaking of "meyears," when he means "my ears," or "Reginer is a charming girl" when he praises Regina, but a vigilant producer ever has ear for such vagaries and their disappearance is but a matter of time.

Compared with the diction of the French, who used to be worshippers of the word, that of English actors stands out in quality. I had recently occasion to realize this when within 24 hours I listened to a French company on a visit to London, and Munro's play "The Mountain," in which some 35 men and no women took part.

I admit that I enjoyed the French performance for its vivacity, for the immense savoir-faire of the actors, but how much of my pleasure was spoiled by the slovenly diction, now in such vertiginous pace that the ear could not follow, now in such whispers that the ear could not catch them. And I sat in the second row of the stalls, and French is as familiar to me as English. This galloping, this "bafouiller," mumbling under breath, as the French call it, is gradually becoming common on the French stage—it spreads everywhere, except perhaps at the Comédie Française.

The next day I heard Munro's play, which lasted four hours, and it contained many harangues dwarfing Hamlet's soliloquies by length and import on the actors' memories. Yet the prompter was never heard more than once and not a single word was lost by faulty articulation. I had a foreigner by my side—and foreigners are apt to scoff at English acting as well as at English plays—but he was a picture to behold in his wonderment and a joy to listen to in the paeons of his praise.

He said that he had studied the stage in many lands—but never had he heard such rhythm, such distinctiveness and such distinction. Nor were the actors all stars; some of them indeed were of the first rank, others habitually work on the second plane; one was a newcomer, scarce six months on the stage. Yet one and all delivered their lines and lengthy passages with precision and with such shading and grading as rendered a dialogue, rich in thought and symbol and in doctrines, accessible to the audience and held them spellbound despite the inordinate length of the play.

If Gilbert had been present, he would have withdrawn his flout and made amends. The English actor of today regards diction as the alma mater of his art.

"The Man From Toronto"

Special from Monitor Bureau

NEW YORK, June 19—Selwyn Theater, Bannister and Powell in association with Miller and Goldreyer, offer "The Man From Toronto," a comedy in three acts by Douglas Murray. Staged by Albert Bannister. The cast:

Martha ..... Peg Entwistle
Robert ..... Gavin Muir
Mrs. Calthorpe ..... Beatrice Hendricks
Mrs. Hubbard ..... Marion Stephenson
Minnie ..... Mona Hungerford
Mr. Priestly ..... George Graham
Fergis Wimbush ..... Curtis Cooksey
Ada ..... Lota Sanders
Ruth Wimbush ..... Ethel Martin

The story of "The Man From Toronto" concerns a woman who masquerades as her own maid in order that she may know that the wealthy suitor, who is bound by a will to marry her, really loves her for herself alone. The plot has been used hundreds of times, both before and since "She Stoops to Conquer" was written. In the present play the theme has not been well handled, which causes its threadbareness to be all the more apparent.

The company engaged is not happily chosen. Just what the result would have been had the two leading parts been played by more accomplished actors it is difficult to say. The play possesses some moments of sparkle, in spite of its overworked central theme, and should be played by comedians of the first rank.

"The Palm Beach Girl"

Special from Monitor Bureau

NEW YORK, June 20—Rivoli Theater, "The Palm Beach Girl," a motion picture adapted by Forrest Halsey from a story by Byron Morgan, directed by Erle Kenton for Paramount.

Here is Bebe Daniels in another Paramount concoction of adventure, sentiment, and clowning supposed to have the necessary qualifications for a feature film. This willing screen worker has been sadly saddled of late with mediocre material, and it is greatly to her credit that she rises above her screen circumstances as well as she does. This newest Daniels picture has rather more redeeming features than usual, what with its fine cast, gorgeous backgrounds, and superlative photography. Miss Daniels is always entertaining to watch, and Paramount is apparently bent on developing her protean proclivities, for she manages to get into nearly as many curious rigs and situations as are usually crowded into a serial picture. She has some decidedly funny moments in attempting to land a tarpon, and here and there she adds deft touchs of humorous characterization that will find popular favor with her audiences.

Partnering her is Lawrence Gray, one of the most likeable of the younger leading men and possessed of a screen technique that is positively refreshing in its seeming simplicity. He never fails to score his points, and with apparently the least effort. Josephine Drake, so amusing in "The Social Celebrity," once more gives a good account of herself in small part. Marguerite Clayton, John Patrick, and Maude T. Gordon are also in the cast. Of all the Florida films to date, "The Palm Beach Girl" gives the most alluring account of its scenic charms, and from a camera angle—Malcolm St. Clair's right hand cameraman, Lee Garmes, was at the crank—it leaves nothing to be desired. For finale a motor boat race has been worked in, and this sequence helps to speed up the film to a considerable degree, although it seems a bit superfluous to plop Miss Daniels overboard for a fourth time in order to make an effective "fade-out" at the end. "Bava l'Africain" Is Acted in Paris

Special Correspondence

The Comédie des Champs-Elysées has given, with "Bava l'Africain" of Bernard Zimmer, one of the best comedies of the year. M. Zimmer, a gifted young author, began his dramatic career two years ago at the Atelier with "Le Veau Gras"—a comedy remarkable for its satirical vigor. "Bava l'Africain" is not particularly original or audacious: it is a simple vaudeville—but a vaudeville in a new style, whose subject is well chosen and significant. It is at once moving and comic, tender and droll. Its humour is natural and wholesome.

In a little town lived a solicitor's clerk. He knew the affairs of the office and the interests of the district better than the solicitor himself. He was wise in his counsels, punctual, scrupulously honest, indeed the model clerk. He was esteemed. But in this scrivener who had not set foot out of the town for the last 25 years, lived the souvenir of the man he had been in his prime. He was all the more popular for this.

Everybody knew that he had been in Congo, for he had told the tale many times. His early adventures embellished his days. He had kept the habit of wearing, against the inoffensive sun of the little town, a white helmet. He was a local celebrity and when the new café had been erected near the railway station it had been named in his honor: "Au Pionnier de l'Oubanghi." There it was that in the evening M. Bava kept Madame Souin, the patronne, and her customers under his charm. They all knew, as well as he, the detail of his marvelous adventures. They all remembered the famous day at Brazzaville when Stanley arrived with 2000 Britishers. These heroic stories, so many times told, still roused the enthusiasm of his listeners. The school children themselves dreamed of explorations in dark forests. The son of Madame Souin desires to serve in the colonial army and Madame Souin herself feels more than admiration for M. Bava.

This tender sentiment is almost the cause of a drama. For there is the sanguine M. Caille, the station master, who dreams of marrying the widow and plans the discomfiture of his rival. He knows a gatekeeper who is an ex-sergeant of the Colonial Army. He brings him to the café and makes him recount his campaigns. Unsuspecting Bava accepts the conversation about Congo. But when comes the story of Stanley and Sergeant Malamine, the gatekeeper denies that Bava could have been present as he, the gatekeeper, was the only white man besides Malamine. And he tells the episode with forceful details and epic verve. Poor Bava is confounded. His most faithful listeners turn against him. Bava goes home. He decides to start for Africa, and in his turn to confound his adversaries.

At the café existence has become dull. The popularity of Bava's successor did not last. He could only tell what he had seen. Ah! where were the enchanting tales of M. Bava! Moreover, a journalist has discovered Bava and has published an article in favor of the old companion of Savorgnan de Brazza. He has even promised to obtain for him a decoration. There is a change of opinion in his favor. Bava triumphantly returns to the café and abandons his project of going back to Congo. As to the affair of Stanley and Malamine, it is the Bava version which is accepted. It is even the modified Bava version which is believed, for Bava has now substituted himself for Malamine, and he is the hero who spoke the strong words to Stanley. The station master himself acquiesces in the superiority of Bava, and happy Madame Souin offers her hand and heart to the hero who accepts them.

Has Bava been to Africa? The author leaves us in doubt, and that is what makes his comedy so piquant. Bava himself does not know any more if he has really been to Congo with Brazza. But how fine, how noble, how true they were, the inventions of M. Bava! "There are no great foundations which do not repose on a legend; the only culprit is humanity who wants to be deceived"—the phrase of Renan could serve as epigraph to the work of M. Zimmer.

Louis Jouvet made of Bava an astonishing composition. The veteran Mevisto played with striking realism the rôle of the gatekeeper, and Madame France Ellys rendered with talent the character of Madame Souin. S. H.

"Prunella" Acted by Theater Guild School

Special from Monitor Bureau

NEW YORK, June 19—At the Garrick Theater, the Theater Guild School presents "Prunella," a fantasy in three acts, by Laurence Housman and Granville Barker, with music by Joseph Moorat. Production directed by Winthrop Ames. Everett Tutchings at the piano. The cast:

Prunella ..... Sylvia Sidney
Prim ..... Louise Powers
Prude ..... Betty Spencer
Privacy ..... Ellen Dorr
Quaint ..... Mary Virginia Heinlein
Abijah ..... John Rynne
Samuel ..... Richard Nye
Jeremy ..... Sanford Meisner
Garden Boy ..... Hallie Manning
Love ..... Charles Allais
Pierrot ..... Ben Lackland
Scaramel ..... Earl McDonald
Hawk ..... Cebra Graves
Mouth ..... Joseph Downing
Kennel ..... DeLancey Cleveland
Callow ..... Arthur Jacobson
Doll ..... Marguerite Churchill
Romp ..... Natalie Browning
Tawdry ..... Cyrena Smith
Coquette ..... Linda Watkins

Among the few worth-while dramatic performances presented on Manhattan Island during the season 1925-26, there should be listed—and well toward the top—the presentation of "Prunella" by members of the Theater Guild School.

It is true that these students had one of the most appealing plays ever written, and it is true that they were directed by the past master in delicacy, Winthrop Ames, but it is also true that they give a fine account of themselves on their own.

Ben Lackland has not the talent or experience of Mr. Ames' first Pierrot—Ernest Glendenning—nor has Sylvia Sidney the depth of expression manifested by Marguerite Clark, who played with Mr. Glendenning, but each gives a fine performance. Every other member of the cast is good.

"The Social Highwayman"

Special from Monitor Bureau

NEW YORK, June 18—Warner Theater, "The Social Highwayman," a motion picture adapted from a story by D. F. Zanuck, directed by William Beaudine for Warner Brothers.

A fairly interesting picture has been fashioned from this tale of a cub reporter on a small-town paper sent to rout out a notorious bandit, but the slap-stick humor injected at intervals has reduced the tone of the film to a considerable degree. At any rate, "The Social Highwayman" gives John Patrick a chance to prove himself capable of more juvenile parts, and he makes an attractive if overzealous leading man. Much of his comedy work is good, and given a more sedulous direction, he should advance a number of pegs before long. Just how free the experienced Mr. Beaudine was to work out his own ideas in this picture is hard to say, but it follows pretty clearly that the man who has recently directed Mary Pickford in her highly successful and sympathetic "Sparrows" had been considerably hampered by a studio staff bent on making the picture a "surefire" success. Dorothy Devore, Montagu Love and James Gordon have the other leading rôles. R. F.

Berlin Stage Notes

BERLIN, June 1 (Special Correspondence)—The summer season is already beginning at several of the theaters here, which means that the lightest and flimsiest of plays are put in the bill and all novelties of a serious character are shelved till next season. One of the exceptions is the State Schauspielhaus, which has been presenting heavy tragedy in the form of a new adaptation of the Argonautic legend entitled "Medea," by Hans Henny Jahnn. Despite the fine acting of Agnes Straub in the name-part, the piece, with its stilted language and its impossible scenes, could not command any success and is now replaced by an admirable presentation of "Peer Gynt."

TILLA DURIEUX

From Erich Goltz's Etched Portrait of the German Actress, Who Recently Appeared in Shaw's "Back to Methuselah" in Berlin.

The Volksbuehne (People's Theater), on Buelow Plaza in the east of the city, has produced an interesting play, "Das trunkene Schiff," by Paul Zech. In a series of concise, multicolored scenes, better described as "situations," the career of the poet, Rimbaud is detailed, beginning with his youthful "sturm und drang" period, when all Paris extolls his genius. Satiated with false pleasures and filled with the longing for adventure, he turns his back on Europe and wanders through the world, finally ending his days in Africa, where he espoused the cause of the natives. His adventures form the groundwork of the numerous weird scenes that, with the aid of a film background, keep the spectators breathless and which, though not infrequently confused, are a success of managerial art and technique. Carl Ludwig Achaz, as Rimbaud, Leonard Steckel and Ferdinand Asbach stood out in the cast among the many artists employed. The theater was crowded as usual with an appreciative audience and calls for authors, actors and manager were general and hearty.

Eugene Robert has succeeded Max Reinhardt pro tem at the Komoedie and is giving, under the collective title of "Theater," three one-act farces, "Vorspiel to King Lear," "Zwischenspiel im Bureau," and "Nachspiel zur Operette," respectively, by Franz Molnar. The little sketches are not new, but are fairly entertaining and the acting of all three is bright, Liselotte Denera and Grete Mosheim, Maria Orska and Wilhelm Diegelmann being especially good.

Bernard Shaw's "Candida" was revived recently at the state Schauspielhaus with an exceptionally good cast. Lina Lossen was delightful in the title rôle and Georg Droescher—an actor who has played many parts well and who is still one of the chief stage-managers of this theater—acted the part of Morell. Veit Harlan as Marchbanks, Florath as Candida's father and Mathilde Suffin as Prossy, also deserved commendation.

The opera house in Unter den Linden is closed for extension and repairs; the second state opera house on Koenigs Platz (now to be called Platz der Republik), whose stage is even larger than that of the older building, has given a Wagner cycle with signal success, "Tristan und Isolde" being remarkably well and evenly presented.

"Dr. Schmidt," a three-act farce by Ladislaus Fodor, is drawing well at the Koeniggraetzer Theater. It has little merit, but the capital acting of Leopoldine Konstantin in the title rôle—Dr. Schmidt is a woman doctor—carries the piece and gains the applause of the audience.

Elisabeth Bergner is in Hamburg for a brief season at the Kammerspiele, her reportory of which includes Rosalind in "As You Like It," Fraulein Julie in Strindberg's drama of that name, and Haitang in Klabund's "Kreidekreis." For every performance all seats are sold out several days in advance. The popular actress will next season resume the rôle of Mrs. Cheney at the Koeniggraetzer Theater here, and act the part of Ann in Shaw's "Man and Superman."

The first performance of Gerhart Hauptmann's new play, "Dorothea Angermann," will take place at the Deutsches Theater under the supervision of Max Reinhardt.

"Hamlet" in modern dress has been presented at Hamburg. Notwithstanding an excellent cast, little more than a success of esteem was obtained, similar to that achieved some years ago in Berlin when Schiller's "Raeuber" was given in modern dress.

Orestes Trilogy at Yale

New Haven, Conn., June 20

Special Correspondence

SHUBERT THEATER, Saturday evening, June 19, 1926, the Yale University Dramatic Association presented "The Drama of Orestes" (Agamemnon, Chœphorœ, and Eumenides), by Æschylus, translated into English verse by Basil Davenport, Yale '26, under the direction of Edgar Montillion Woolley, 1911, director of undergraduate dramatic production. The cast:

Watchman ..... B. Long
Clytemnestra ..... H. Phillips
Herald ..... H. C. Potter
Agamemnon ..... G. Richards

"Greek, sir, is like lace; every man gets as much of it as he can."—Dr. Samuel Johnson.

It may not be too much to say that this performance of the Greek Trilogy, "The Drama of Orestes," by Æschylus, was one of the important events of the American theatrical season just coming to a close—important in that it proves that Greek drama is just as good as any other kind of drama when it is presented intelligently. When it is stated that every moment of the three acts was interesting and that during many of the scenes the large audience was held in breathless tension, some idea may be gained of the convincing manner in which this play was directed and played.

In the library and with time for study and reflection these grand old plays may be enjoyed thoroughly, but the ponderous treatment of language, the subject matter of the dramas themselves and the technique employed by the famous triumvirate, Æschylus, Sophocles, and Euripides are equally foreign to modern ears and render them almost uncomprehensible in a theater. Or so several of them had seemed to the present reviewer until he thoroughly enjoyed this Æschylus play, as presented by the Yale Dramatic Association.

To begin with, a clear and understandable translation and adaptation was made by Basil Davenport. The translation may not be as orthodox as the Greek commentators might desire, but it is graceful and lyric and was unanimously appreciated by an audience that heard and comprehended.

Then the drama was directed by Edgar M. Woolley in a manner that earns only admiration and praise. Mr. Woolley's adroit handling of the chorus, keeping it constantly alive as an accompaniment and aid to the central theme of the play, was nothing short of remarkable. Here again the Greek scholars will object that the breaking up of the choruses and allotting sections to individual speakers, instead of having them all spoken in unison, is very likely as far from the way it was done in Athens during the author's time as anything might be, and yet such a handling of the lines is vastly to the liking of our modern audience.

Whether of legend or history, the story goes that from the time of Homer to about the fifth century B. C., the chorus was the all-important thing. That Thespis of Icaria was the first to step out of the chorus and address certain verses to the other members of the chorus. This was revolutionary and frowned upon by those who stood for tradition. Æschylus introduced the second actor and Sophocles for dramatic purposes used the third. From then on the transition from chorus to principal actors was fairly rapid. Mr. Woolley retains the dramatic material of the chorus, but has it spoken by individuals rather than by the group as a whole for the sake of clarification. It is a daring departure but it saved his performance.

Mr. Woolley's groupings and stage pictures for this play are in the same class with those to be seen at the Neighborhood Playhouse, New York, or shown by the Moscow Art Theater. The stage settings—also freely adapted—by H. M. Shoemaker, Yale '27 (Art), with its different elevations reached by broad flights of steps formed a majestic background for the beautiful costumes by W. M. Hinkle '27 and G. A. Sanderson '28.

The acting of both principals and chorus was sincere and convincing and so unified that it is difficult to pick out individuals for special comment, which is the mood a fine performance should leave with us, but for the excellently sustained quality of the performance special credit is due to: H. Phillips, H. C. Potter, G. Richards, L. P. Ross, C. B. Ives, C. T. Bingham, B. C. Cutler and B. Davenport, who made the translation.

The music, composed by Dean David Stanley Smith, added greatly to the charm of the thoroughly worthwhile and enjoyable performance.

"The Last Viking"

OSLO, Norway, June 2 (Special Correspondence) — Johan Bojer's novel, "The Last Viking," has been adapted for the screen by Tancred Ibsen, the dramatist's grandson, who has studied in Hollywood the American motion picture industry. The main part probably will be played by Gunnar Tolnaes, a Norwegian actor, who has recently had a success in the theaters in middle Europe, and who has already appeared in several motion pictures. A company is being formed that will undertake the task of making the motion picture in cooperation with the author. The filming will take place this summer, somewhere along the Norwegian coast.

The goal of hopes unrealized for any other car

Enthusiasm over this latest great new, 90-degree, eight-cylinder Cadillac is more ardent and eager and vigorous than was the outburst of approval over the first great eight-cylinder Cadillac eleven years ago.

It is an enthusiasm which has burst the ordinary bounds of restraint and registered itself in a sales preference surpassing all past golden periods in Cadillac history.

This freshened and swelling enthusiasm over Cadillac is impressive because it is spontaneous and unforced.

It is public recognition in the truest sense—a recognition that Cadillac performance is still, as it always has been, the goal of hopes unrealized for every other car.

Gathering Perfumes From One's Own Garden

ONE of the chief pleasures to which one looks forward in the spring, is the reappearance of the flowers, both those in one's own garden and those which nature has scattered broadcast lavishly in the woods and fields. There are few flowers which are not pleasing in one way or another, but undoubtedly those which are dearest are those which are endowed with an agreeable perfume. Even such blossoms as the mignonette which have but little to boast of in form and color are highly prized for this one quality.

The fragrance derived from plants is found not only in the flowers, but in various other portions, such as the foliage, the stems, the bark and the roots. Pre-eminent among flowers noted for their fragrance are the rose, the violet, the jasmine, the orange flower, the hyacinth, the cassia, the lavender and the tuberose. Among plants which possess fragrant leaves one thinks at once of the rose geranium and of those garden simples, sage, thyme, mint, fennel, caraway and rosemary. The odor of the sweet birch is located largely in the inner bark, and cinnamon is likewise the bark of the tree.

Fragrance Is Always in an Oil

But no matter in what part of the plant one finds the fragrance, its location is in an essential oil. Essential oils or essences are commonly called volatile oils, which means that they vaporize at ordinary temperatures without undergoing decomposition. It is the tiny volatilized particles which bear the odor to our nostrils.

As a rule the more durable portions of the plant, such as roots and stems and bark and leaves, retain their odor for a very long time when dried. But some of the most exquisite odors, such as those of the rose, the jasmine, the orange flower and the violet are located in the more or less perishable blossom. And while even dried petals of these flowers retain a certain sweetness, it is no more to be compared to the fresh perfume exhaled than is the flavor of a dried peach to one just plucked from the bough. For centuries, therefore, men have sought to find some means of capturing and preserving these delicate aromas after the blossoming time is over. It was probably the Arabs who first succeeded in this.

There is a charming story told in an old book called "Annals of the Mongolian Empire," written by a Venetian traveler. He relates that a Persian princess upon being betrothed prepared a gift of rose water for her fiancé. But being of a generous and lavish disposition she presented it not in small flasks but as a fountain within her garden from which a rivulet of the precious liquid ran. Strolling in the garden in the cool of the day the betrothed couple observed a delicate oily film on the streamet of perfumed water. They skimmed this off and found it to be the precious essence or attar of roses.

Many a woman owning a lovely rose garden or possessed of broad beds of sweet violets or lilies of the valley, has probably wished that she knew some way of collecting and preserving its fragrance. As a matter of fact, this is not very difficult even for an amateur.

There are three chief methods of extracting the odors of flowers. These consist of distillation, maceration, and absorption (or enfleurage, to give it the French name by which the process is generally known).

In the case of distillation the fragrant blossom or petals are placed in either hot water or pure grain alcohol and then distilled, the resulting product or distillate being cooled in order to condense it.

Both maceration and enfleurage are absorption processes. They both depend upon the affinity which all sorts of oils and greases possess for odors. Housekeepers are only too well acquainted with the fact that butter, cream, or milk will absorb such strong odors as those of onions or garlic, if left uncovered in their vicinity. But happily they and other greases are equally ready to absorb agreeable odors. If fragrant flowers be placed in fine olive oil—a process called maceration—the oil will absorb the fragrance.

The Absorption Process

Enfleurage, however, is rather simpler. Plates of glass set in frames are employed in this process. Pure lard or mutton suet is melted and run in a thin sheet over each side of the glass. Since the wooden frames fit each other exactly when they are placed one above another, they form a stack of air-tight chambers, having both roof and floor covered with odorless grease. Within these chambers are placed freshly gathered petals of fragrant flowers. These remain from 8 to 24 hours, according to the kind of flower, at the end of which time they have given up their fragrance to the grease. They are removed and fresh petals are put in. This is repeated until the coating of fat in the frame is impregnated with the scent to a certain degree which must conform to a regular standard.

This impregnated fat is then scraped off and placed in a covered jar and a fresh layer of fat is run onto the glass plates and the process repeated till the jar is full. This sweet-scented grease or fat is known as pomade. It is cut into small pieces and dropped into a wide mouthed jar, partly filled with alcohol. The alcohol must be specially deodorized and is then known as "Cologne spirit." Since the alcohol has an even greater affinity for the perfume than the original grease, it extracts it. One authority advises making the transfer as quickly as possible, then sealing the jar with paraffin and letting it stand for a couple of weeks, shaking it up a little bit every day. At the end of this time the alcohol is strained off into perfume bottles.

This method of absorption is considered by experts to produce the choicest grades of perfume. It is this process which is chiefly used in the great flower-growing region of southern France, of which Grasse is the center. It is also practiced in Dorsetshire.

In Bulgaria, however, which is the great rose garden of Europe, the blossoms as a rule are distilled in water. The first product of the distillation is rose water and this is repeatedly distilled so as to be increasingly concentrated until finally the pure oil or attar of roses is obtained. The perfume is produced in great central distilleries, from the fresh blossoms brought in by the peasants and other rose growers. To produce one pound of the precious attar 3000 pounds of rose leaves are required. In the most up-to-date plants the distillation is done by means of steam.

Distillation for Amateurs

The fragrance of flowers, however, may be captured by distilling either alcohol or hot water containing the freshly gathered flowers. Either of these methods can readily be applied on a small scale by persons desiring to use the flowers of their own garden. In all cases, whether by absorption or distillation, the blossoms must be gathered early in the morning, preferably while the dew is still on them, since the fragrance is less strong after they have been exposed to hot sunshine.

Whether alcohol or water is employed, the blossoms are placed in the liquid within a container to which heat is applied so as to cause the mingled vapors of steam or alcohol and the essential oil of the flower to pass off into a worm or coil where they can be condensed. Alcohol is really best for use on a small scale, since it not only absorbs the scent readily but retains it for a very long while. To each pound of flower petals, eight fluid ounces of alcohol must be allowed.

These should be placed in a container—a gallon can will do very well—which is then sealed. A cork can be fitted in the mouth of the can, then a hole bored in the cork just large enough to insert one end of the piece of rubber tubing. This tube can connect with the coil spoken of, but if this is not convenient, a longer tube may be employed and the other end placed in an empty jar which has been chilled and which is put at a distance from the fire by means of which the alcohol is heated. The fire should not be applied directly to the can but by means of a double boiler or water bath. When the water in which the can is set begins to boil, the vapors of alcohol carrying with them the vapors of the essential oil in the blossoms will pass through the tube and upon reaching the cold jar be condensed and drip into it drop by drop. The place where the tube enters the cork should be tightly sealed to prevent escape of the vapor. This can be done by smearing it with a little fresh putty.

Blending Perfumes

A great field for ingenuity is open to the amateur perfume maker in the blending of perfumes. In all cases the different fragrances such as rose, violet, lavender, geranium, rose-geranium, etc., should be distilled separately and the alcoholic extracts thus procured be mingled experimentally in various proportions until a distinctive and agreeable blend is obtained.

Other pleasant methods of preserving the fragrances of the garden consist in the making of "pastes" and of pot-pourri jars. To make the paste the petals are steeped in just enough water to cover them and then pounded in a mortar to a thick paste. To this is added some of the home-made perfume and the mass is then dried in an air-tight container.

There are many recipes for pot-pourri. In all, the petals should be dried and then arranged in layers separated by table salt in the proportion of two tablespoonfuls of salt to a two-inch layer of the dried leaves. Various spices, such as cloves, cinnamon and ginger, are then added and also a few drops of attar of roses. Here, too, there is an opportunity for individual blends.

Two- and Three-Piece Costumes

London Special Correspondence

THIS season's two and three-piece costumes show less formality, less severity, and more variety in the materials used; the style is graceful and gay. Printed fabrics are greatly in vogue, printed chiffon, now popular for evening dresses, will be much used for the summer. Printed crêpe expresses the vogue, also printed shantung and other silks. Check silks are smart, the newest of these are self-colored, the designs being obtained in weaving. The size of the check varies, some are an inch, some larger, others lined with the same material and this carries out the ensemble effect. Frisca is popular for this purpose as well as for three-piece suits made in the plain and plaid design. It is a spongy rather transparent fabric and follows the season's vogue for loose and canvas-like materials. A coat can be made of plain frisca with a jumper and skirt of the plaid variety—parts of which may be pleated—both being edged with the plain material and in such a way that one merges into the other and the two pieces can be mistaken for a gown. This tendency in design is noticeable in many models. Jumpers quite small. A dress of this silk will look trim and smart and is easily worn. In the accompanying illustration is a dress designed in this fabric showing some of the pattern picked out in a light gold thread on a willow-green silk; the dress is edged with silk and finished with a lingerie collar in écru tint. The coat accompanying this dress has a touch of the same silk on the collar and is made of green frisca lined with check silk. The straight line of the back is cut in a slight bolero effect with loose fronts so that it can be wrapped round the figure or caught up to suit the wearer. Worn with this costume is a hat of crochet straw in light gold.

This Dress Is Made of Check Silk in Willow-Green Picked Out in a Light Gold Thread. The Coat Is Fashioned of Green Frisca and Is Lined With the Silk of Which the Dress Is Made.

Redingotes

Long redingotes are made of some light material to go with most summer gowns. If the gown is made of printed silk or chiffon the coat is may open right through or low down, this is convenient with the vogue for tighter bodices. Yokes also appear either straight or in a deep "V."

Materials

Taffeta is more popular than it has been for some time, also gros-grain silk. These materials suit the style for more closely fitting bodices and flared skirts, but a gown of this nature has a dressy appearance. A coat of natural Kasha may be worn with a chiffon dress of the same tone worn over a shrimp-pink foundation. With a navy-blue charmeline coat and a blue, white and magenta printed crêpe gown, may be worn a magenta hat. A plain chiffon cape tied with a large chiffon bow on one shoulder and scalloped at the bottom is appropriate with a gaily-patterned chiffon gown for midsummer; the cape is made of double chiffon, the top layer being shorter than the one underneath, but both will have a scalloped edge forming two lines round the edge of the cape. Sleeveless coats in chiffon are also seen with an evening dress for restaurant wear.

Cubist Effects

The cubist style appears expressed in a two-tone effect, one light, the other dark. This style is noticeable in millinery where part of a crown may be made of light, the rest of drak-colored material. The same idea is carried out in the brim. In costumes the effect is less marked; for instance, a green crêpe dress may have a cape in a darker shade or a costume may be strapped with a much darker tone.

Woolen velvet makes a serviceable wrap, either cape or coat with raglan sleeves, for the morning or sports wear and may be worn with a cashmere dress. With a silk tennis frock also it will make a pleasant wrap.

The New Umbrella

Light silks in soft pastel shades are a new idea for umbrellas. They remind one of those in fashion about 1830, but they have diminished vastly in proportions; the one used in the long ago was a real mother-gamp in comparison with the style in vogue today, which is smaller than its sister of 1925. One could even wish for a wet day if one might see an army of such umbrellas in a variety of beautiful shades shining when wet like colored crystals.

A Bathroom Economy

Those who make use of a wire soap-shaker in the kitchen will find it an equally useful and economical article in the bathroom. The small pieces of soap which are constantly accumulating there to the annoyance of everyone may be stored at once in the shaker. An inconspicuous place should be found for hanging it near the tub. When the latter is filled for the bath, a few swishes of the shaker through the water will produce a quick suds. No least bit of soap will ever be wasted in the bathroom if this plan is followed.

Peanut Butter Sandwiches

Peanut butter sandwiches—how the children like to eat them! And here is a way by which the making of them may be greatly simplified. Into a small pan put the amount of peanut butter to be used, together with a lump of ordinary butter. To this add a small amount of milk or cream and stir over a rather low fire until it becomes a thin, spreadable paste. Once this method is tried one will never again attempt to spread cold peanut butter.

A Woman Lighthouse Keeper

ALTHOUGH during the past decade many lines of industry and endeavor have succumbed to the onrush of the modern woman, there is one vocation that is not overcrowded, that of lighthouse keeper.

The call of the city is very often heard and heeded by women who have their own way to make in the world. There they believe they will find wide opportunity for advancement, and manifold chances for diversion and pleasure. The desolation and loneliness of the country, as it is so often pictured, depresses them, and when the sea calls there are few who hear it, and yet there are those who find that the most lonely place in the world is a city crowd—a throng of human beings on pleasure or business bent, without regard for the stranger who watches it go by.

Never Found It Lonely

According to the records of the Bureau of Lighthouses at Washington, D. C., there are but six women who occupy the important, and sometimes hazardous, position of keeper of the light.

One of these women is Mrs. Fannie L. Salter, who is the keeper of the Turkey Point Light, on the coast of the State of Maryland.

For nearly a quarter of a century Mrs. Salter's husband was a lighthouse keeper at various stations along the coast, and for 20 years after she married him he continued his work.

Most women would waver a little at the thought of spending their lives in such lonely confines. Not so Mrs. Salter. She loves the call of the sea and revels in its moods—the bright, sunshiny days when the water seems like a sea of gold, and the days of storm when the billows roll high. It has been her life. First for many happy years she assisted her husband with his duties, and learned all there is to know about lighthouses. Then when in 1925 she was left alone with three children, she chose to continue the vocation.

There were, probably, many things that she was capable of doing, but the city did not appeal to her. Years of life by the sea had made her love it.

"The thing that I knew best how to do," she says, "was to keep a lighthouse, so I determined to see if I could not stay at Turkey Point."

Appointment as Keeper

It was not without trepidation that she awaited from the United States Government a reply to her application for the position. It often takes the United States a long time to act, especially when one wants it to hurry, as did Mrs. Salter. There is much red tape to be untangled, papers to be made out, official signatures to be procured. In due time, however, she was delighted to receive a long, official-looking envelope which, when opened, was found to contain her appointment as keeper of the Turkey Point Light Station. So she began her official work.

Enjoyable Solitude

The Turkey Point Light is what is known as a one-keeper station, and the duties are not arduous. Of course the great light has to be illumined at a certain time every night and the keeper can not be absent, but this takes only a few minutes. There is other work to be done, however. The machinery must be kept clean, the lenses polished and bright, the sea watched for special conditions, boats in distress assisted by signals, and a standard of high efficiency and service maintained.

The house attached to the Turkey Point Light is commodious with a broad piazza, and there is a considerable plot of ground with shade trees adjoining. In fact, it is an ideal home for one who enjoys the solitude and companionship of the sea. Mrs. Salter declares that she loves her work, and the independence of her life.

A Delicious Conserve

Here is a conserve which is both delicious and economical, having for its base red currant jelly. This jelly is made in the ordinary fashion, but a few minutes before it is ready to remove from the fire into each measure is dropped a handful of red raspberries. This gives a blended flavor of currant and red raspberry, with the latter predominating. This method minimizes the amount of bothersome seeds, and where red raspberries are expensive it is a much cheaper conserve than one made entirely from the berries.

Seasonable Luggage

VACATION days approaching, the luggage problem resolves itself into what will be most presentable and convenient. Up-to-date luggage, however, is designed to be smart looking and compact.

First in almost every one's plans is hand luggage. The sturdy capacious English kit bag usually has masculine appeal, and is large enough to include a dressing case. Both are usually of cowhide. The same bag is often called a Gladstone, also, but the latter is more square at the top. Pigskin is a favored leather for the Gladstone. Both have dependable double handles.

The shiny patent leather hat-box is favored among feminine travelers, for it will hold many things besides hats. Well packed it will take care of clothing for a week-end jaunt and it has pockets for small accessories. However, the "zipper" is having as much popularity, as the Chanel pouch purse. It looks much like a rolled blanket, but it is made of russet or red cowhide or chocolate seal and it can be locked. Best of all, it weighs practically nothing, so even a porter can be dispensed with. Another English piece of luggage is a "blouse bag," which is wide enough to pack a dress without crushing. In tan alligator calf it subscribes to the fad for fancy leather. It is 20 inches long by 14 inches wide, by 7 deep, and it resembles the always useful suit- or "tray-case." The up-to-date suitcase indeed has a removable tray, fitted with toilet articles. Boarskin is seen in these. The Pullman case of similar dimensions is designed to slip under a Pullman seat or to be placed on the running board of a car. It is "tailored" like a trunk.

One of the most convenient new pieces of luggage is the wardrobe suitcase. It is light and compact enough to be hand baggage, yet it has all the advantages of the wardrobe trunk.

A "carry-all" is aptly named, for it will dispose of coats, umbrellas, shoes and odds and ends. It is usually made of a water-proof plaid with leather bindings and straps for reinforcements. And there are inside pockets and a handle as well.

The up-to-date wardrobe trunk has a solid square base, with easy swinging doors and deep drawers. It locks automatically, and will stand in a corner in such a fashion as to take up no extra floor space when open.

For a summer's outing, some electric devices may be desired to pack in this wardrobe trunk. One clever curling iron, with fold-up handles is fitted into the hole of an electric flat-iron purposely contrived thus. The whole set is completed by a folding covered ironing board.

Other useful traveling accessories include a miniature laundry set for drying underwear and hosiery, a folding drinking cup, a sewing roll-up, a leather writing portfolio and journals for jotting down the red-letter days of any trip.

SUNSET STORIES

The Great Wooden Horse Show

JOHNNY'S father had taken him to what is called a Horse Show, which is the kind of a show where there is nothing but horses and horses and horses, and lots of people come to look at them. But it didn't interest Johnny as much as it did his father, because it seemed to Johnny that he saw a good many horses anyway without having to put on his best clothes and go to a show.

It was almost a week after he had been to the Horse Show that Johnny had a great idea, which he told to William, who told it to Henry, who told it to Reginald, who told it to Joseph, and so on till it had been told to every boy in that neighborhood who had a rocking horse.

"We've got two rocking horses in our family," said William, "and an old one that hasn't any rockers. Does a rocking horse without any rockers count?"

"Any kind of a wooden horse counts," said Johnny. "I thought at first of calling it a Rocking Horse Show, and then a rocking horse without rockers wouldn't really be a rocking horse. But I'm going to call it a Wooden Horse Show, and that lets in any kind of a wooden horse."

Now, as everybody knows, the best part of any kind of a show is getting ready for it. Johnny had his father's barn, where there was a real horse on which his father went riding, to give the show in. And his father said he could have it in the barn if he left room to get in and out. But when the wooden horses began to arrive anybody could soon see that there wouldn't be room for the show in the barn, so Johnny decided to have it in the yard. And the only trouble with that was that people could look over the fence and see the show without coming in through the gate. But there was a proper sign, printed with red and blue chalk on a large sheet of wrapping paper, which said:

Admission a Pin

And there was Johnny's little brother, Jimmy, at the gate to take in the pins.

All that morning the horses were arriving for the show. Some came on rollers, and some were dragged along on their rockers, and some came in express wagons. People who went by were surprised to see so many wooden horses. There were almost new wooden horses, and big wooden horses, and middle-sized wooden horses, and little wooden horses, and wooden horses that rocked, and wooden horses that pranced up and down, and wooden horses that rolled. And there were two or three wooden horses that were just a horse's head on a stick. Johnny had not been quite sure whether horses that were just a horse's head on a stick really belonged in the show, but he had decided to let them in. And after the horses were all in the yard, everybody who had brought a horse went outside and paid a pin to come in again.

And Johnny's mother sold him a large plate of sugar cookies for the pins, and every owner of a wooden horse had a sugar cookie for a prize.

As Johnny's father said when he came home from his office, it was the most successful wooden horse show that had ever been held anywhere in the United States or Europe.

NOTES

Two master tournaments are scheduled this summer in the United States with Jose R. Capablanca entered in each, the first at Lake Hopatcong, New York, July 7-21, and the second held in conjunction with the Western United States championship tournament at Chicago Aug. 21 to Sept. 2. The New York one will be limited to five (double round) players, and takes place at the Hotel Alamac-in-the Mountains, with prizes from $500 down. Those invited are: Capablanca, Marshall, Torre, Edward Lasker and Maroczy. Chicago's affair will have 10 players as a limit, with the first prize $650, and will take place at the Hotel La Salle, while the Western United States championship is going on with a first prize of $150. The world's champion's participation should go far to make both these tournaments a success.

By winning first place in the Commercial Chess League, New York, for the third successive time, the Bell Telephone Laboratories team secured permanent possession of the Potter chess trophy. This year's standing follows:

Teams:	Matches Won	Matches Lost	Games Won	Games Lost
Bell Tel Laboratories	8	0	25	7
Tide Water Oil Co.	6	2	22	10
Western Un. Tel. Co	5½	2½	20½	11½

N. Y. Edison Co.	2½	5½	12	20
H. L. Doherty Co.	2	6	9	23
McGraw-Hill Pub Co.	0	8	3½	28½

Dr. Emanuel Lasker has left the United States for Germany, after completing a translation of his new manual on chess.

E. D. Bogoljubow is planning a visit to the United States in the autumn of this year.

A quadrangular tournament held in connection with the fortieth anniversary of the Amsterdam C. C., Holland, was won by B. Colle of Belgium, with Tartakower second, Euwe third, and Pannekock last. One of the games:

ONTARIO FARMERS FORM WHEAT POOL

TORONTO, Ont., June 18 (Special Correspondence)—A wheat pool system of grain marketing is to be established by the United Farmers' Co-operative Company similar to that prevailing in the western provinces. Contracts will be entered into by the Ontario farmers to deliver their grain only to the pool, which will then feed the market in accordance with the best marketing practice. The Ontario organization will gather in the wheat, but the selling will be done by the central selling organization already established by the three western pools of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Under the system already established in western Canada, the farmer receives a percentage of the price of his grain on delivery, later payments being made when the price is pooled as amongst all the grain sent in. The small grain grower is not compelled under the new system to slump his grain on the market immediately it is threshed, forcing down the price because he may be pressed for money.

In the Ship Lanes

SUMMER cruises are scheduled by several lines, the ships to make these voyages leaving New York during the last week in June or the early part of July. Among those scheduled are the Carinthia of the Cunard Line, leaving New York June 29 for the North Cape and fjords of Norway; the California of the Anchor Line on July 1 for the Mediterranean, and the Lancastria of the Cunard Line leaving New York June 30 for a combination cruise, taking tourists to the Mediterranean and thence to Norway.

The Lapland of the Red Star Line will make a summer voyage through the Mediterranean, leaving New York July 7. Two cruises have been arranged by the Norwegian-American Line, with the ships Stavangerfjord and Bergensfjord. The former left New York June 12, and after a layover at Oslo, will leave there July 1 for two weeks in the North Cape vicinity, while the Bergensfjord, leaving New York in regular service on July 3, after reaching Bergen, will lay over for a few days and then make a two-weeks trip to the North Cape, leaving Bergen July 15.

The growth of the cruise business has been rapid in recent years and plans are being made for several extended winter cruises next season. The Canadian Pacific, Red Star and Cunard will have ships in round-the-world service and similar cruises by tourist companies with chartered ships are also being arranged. In addition to this, the Royal Mail will repeat its South America-African cruise with a larger ship and numerous voyages to the West Indies are to be scheduled by various companies.

Losing a Day

A day is "lost" westbound in crossing the Pacific and likewise is gained on the eastbound trip. From Seattle, the schedules of the Admiral-Oriental Line show a time of 12 days west and 10 days east. This is accounted for by the fact that the world's day begins in the Pacific Ocean, theoretically, at the 180th degree of longitude, which lies east of Japan, and is exactly opposite Greenwich meridian, which nearly bisects London.

As no countries lie in the immediate vicinity of the 180th degree, the world's date changes there. Ships coming east from the Orient, crossing this line on a Sunday would find themselves back in Saturday again. Thus, the ship actually has two Sundays in its eastward voyage and obtains a day's steaming which does not show on the calendar. In consequence of this, it makes the eastward passage in 10 days' calendar time, or 11 days' elapsed time.

Westward, a ship crossing the 180th degree on a Sunday would find itself in the same hour of Monday, so that the schedules show a calendar time of 12 days, although the actual elapsed time is approximately the same as the eastbound trip, 11 days. The theory is similar to that employed in American railroads, passengers who have crossed the continent having set their watches back three times, an hour each time, going west, to account for the four different times within the United States. Westbound, they thus gain an hour each day, or night, while coming east, approaching the sun, they lose an hour every 15 degrees of longitude, or, roughly, every day on the four-day transcontinental journey.

Mississippi River Craft

Criticism of the attempt to utilize the upper Mississippi River for commerce is regretfully made in an editorial in the Great Northern Semaphore by one who, having always lived on the river, regrets that it cannot regain its former glory when ships plied it to the Twin Cities. One outstanding reason which the writer cites as militating against its use as a waterway is the absence of down-river traffic. "No boat, or line of boats could operate profitably, running loaded upstream and light with the current downstream," he states.

The trend of traffic in the upper Mississippi Valley in recent years has been east and west rather than north and south. A further difficulty is the absence of water. The denudation of forests and the increasing cultivation of the soil throughout the upper river watershed has caused the volume of water to decline from 30 to 40 per cent, it is stated. Sandbars, once covered in freshets, are now above water constantly.

Canal Rate Regulation

A hearing scheduled to take place in New York June 27 before a member of the United States Shipping Board will take up the matter of regulation of rates by water lines to the Pacific coast. The westbound movement is heavily over-tonnaged at present, due to the eastbound movement of lumber which brings ships into the Atlantic and which must obtain at least some return tonnage in order to make the round trip profitable.

In order to obtain this, these ships, many of them tramps, are cutting the regular Conference rates, westbound. A divergence of opinion exists among both the Conference and the non-Conference lines as to the desirability of government rate regulation. Some of the principal lines are unwilling to state their present views until they learn what direction the scheduled hearing will take.

Westward, the principal tonnage is steel, the bulk of which moves through the port of Baltimore, New York being a smaller port, in point of tonnage, than Baltimore. Eastbound, lumber is the principal dry cargo, although some of the ships, notably the Panama Pacific, having refrigerating facilities for the handling of citrous fruits from southern California.

JAPANESE FELLS ANCIENT TREE

TOKYO, May 26 (Special Correspondence)—Suit for $400 has been instituted by a Japanese landlord against his tenant as damages for a maidenhair tree which the tenant cut down. The tree shaded his property too much, says the tenant, so he cut it down without asking the permission of the owner of the land. It so happens that this particular tree was more than three centuries old and that the inhabitants of the district and their ancestors have long held festivals under its branches.

A Trip of Delightful Surprises— VACATION in the Charmed Land

PACIFIC COAST EMPIRE TOUR
Washington
Oregon
California

See "all the Pacific Coast" this summer — the biggest transportation bargain you can find. Come out over one of the four transcontinental lines. See Seattle, Spokane, Portland, Tacoma; then, by rail or water, to Oakland, San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego.

Or, reverse the route; come north by train or steamer. Ask about trips to Alaska and Hawaii. Nowhere else can you see so much or do so much for so little. See "All the West" in 1926. The trip of a lifetime remembered a lifetime!

If Europe had Puget Sound, Mount Rainier or Mount Baker or Lakes Crescent or Chelan, or the San Juan Archipelago, which are incidental attractions of the Seattle region, they would be lures which would attract travelers from all corners of the globe. The old belief that one has to go to a foreign country for scenic "thrill" is passing because Americans are learning that in their own country, in the Puget Sound region, they have more than the Swiss Alps, the Pyrenees, and the Mediterranean can offer.

"See America First" means something, because for less expense and effort you can see here, in the West, all and more than a long expensive trip to Europe would net you.

Special round-trip fare to September 15. Ask your ticket agent. Write today for free, illustrated vacation book: "Seattle and The Charmed Land." Room 109, Chamber of Commerce, Seattle, Washington.

OIL AND RAIL ISSUES ENJOY MUCH ACTIVITY

Many Stocks Reach New High Points for the Year

NEW YORK, June 22 (AP)—Strength of the oil and railroad shares featured the irregularly higher movement of prices at the opening of today's stock market.

Union Oil of California and Wheeling & Lake Erie common each opened about a point higher, and most of the other issues in those groups improved fractionally on initial sales, Union Pacific touching a new top at 151¾.

United States Steel common and General Motors were heavy.

Oils changed hands in large volume at advancing prices, with buying undoubtedly stimulated by the optimistic statements of President Teagle of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and President Shoup of Tidewater-Associated on trade conditions.

More than a score of new high records for the year were established in the first half hour of trading. Among the rails, which were in demand on expectation of favorable May earnings statements, new peak prices were recorded by Gulf, Mobile & Northern common and preferred, and Lehigh Valley. Atlantic Coast Line jumped 4 points, and Rock Island and Lackawanna a point or so.

Market Is Broad

Other issues to exceed their previous high marks of the year included Radio Corporation, Electric Storage Battery, Pullman and Gotham Silk Hosiery first preferred.

General Motors and United States Steel common continued under pressure in the early trading.

Foreign exchanges were heavy with the exception of demand sterling, which ruled unchanged around $4.86⅛. French francs broke 7½ points to around 2.80c in reflection of the difficulty encountered by Briand in forming a new cabinet. Belgian and Spanish currencies also recorded sharp recessions.

The buying movement in the rail shares expanded in breadth and volume before noon, with numerous gains of 1 to 3½ points embracing Lehigh Valley, the Gulf, Mobile & Northern issues, Atchison, Frisco, Kansas City Southern, Rock Island, Nickel Plate and the Erie stocks.

A brisk demand for the sugar shares carried South Porto Rico, American Sugar Refining and Great Western up 2 to 5 points, but Postum Cereal reflected disappointment over the small increase in the dividend.

Call money renewed at 4¼ per cent.

Railroad Bonds Strong

Buying activities in today's bond trading were patterned after those in the stock market, with rail and oil liens developing the greatest strength. Foreign obligations held firm, although most of the popular issues found difficulty in breaking through their previous high levels.

The satisfactory showing of the railroad earnings reports for May which have so far made their appearance, indications of progress in pending mergers, and assurances of improved traffic conditions contributed to the strength of carrier obligations. Erie consolidated and convertible issues were active and higher, while moderate gains were recorded by Seaboard 6s and Denver & Rio Grande Western 5s.

A rise of more than a point in Skelly Oil 6½s was linked with consolidation rumors touching most of the leading independents. At the same time buying of other petroleum issues was influenced by the testimony of leaders in the industry that conditions were steadily improving. American Writing Paper 6s continued to push forward in response to reorganization plans, but Dominion Iron & Steel 5s were adversely affected by similar developments.

Japanese Government 6½s and Great Consolidated Power 7s, both of which reached 1926 top prices, were the most conspicuous features of the foreign group.

DIVIDENDS

Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co. declared the regular quarterly dividend of $3 a share, payable July 1 to stock of record June 22.

National Cash Register declared the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents on Class A common, payable July 15 to stock of record June 30.

Regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent will be paid on July 1 to preferred stockholders of C. F. Hovey Co. of record June 25.

Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit declared a quarterly dividend of $1 on the common, payable July 15 to stock of record July 1; also four regular quarterly dividends of $1.50 on the preferred, payable July 15, Oct. 15, Jan. 15, 1927, and April 15, 1927, to stock of record July 1, Oct. 1, Dec. 31 and April 1, 1927.

Chicago Railway Equipment Company declared the regular quarterly dividends of 75 cents on the common and 1¾ per cent on the preferred, payable July 1 to stock of record June 19.

Nipissing Mines Company declared the regular quarterly dividend of 3 per cent, payable July 20 to stock of record June 30.

Gotham Silk Hosiery Company declared the regular quarterly dividends of 1¾ per cent on its first and second preferred stocks, payable Aug. 2 to stock of record July 15.

Barnet Leather declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent on the preferred, payable July 1 to stock of record June 30.

United States Gas & Electric Company declared the regular semiannual dividend of 2½ per cent on the 5 per cent preferred stock, payable July 15 to stock of record June 30.

Abraham & Strauss declared the regular quarterly 1¾ per cent preferred dividend, payable Aug. 1 to stock of record July 15.

Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad declared a quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent on its preferred stock, payable Aug. 2 to stock of record July 15.

E. W. Bliss Company declared the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the common, $1 on first preferred, 87½c on the Class A second preferred, payable July 1 to stock of record June 22.

National Rockland Bank declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent and an extra dividend of 2½ per cent, both payable July 1 to stock of record June 22. Similar extra dividends were declared three and six months ago.

Consolidated Royalty Oil Company declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent, payable July 25 to stock of record July 15.

EIGHT MONTHS' WOOL SOLD

SAN ANGELO, Tex., June 22—The largest sale of eight months' wool in Texas was recorded when Wool Growers' Central Storage Company sold more than 500,000 pounds at private treaty at the week's end. Hallowell, Jones & Donald, Boston, purchased around 300,000 pounds; Studley & Simery, Boston, approximately 100,000 pounds, and Colonial Wool Company about two car loads. Some of the clips commanded 31 cents, but the average was nearer 30 cents.

OIL PRODUCTION DECREASES

Oil & Gas Journal estimates domestic crude oil production at 2,029,976 barrels daily in the week ended June 19, a decline of 3240 daily from the preceding week. Light oil averaged 1,504,011 daily, an increase of 4900.

CLOTH PRICE TREND DOWN DURING WEEK

Weakness in Raw Cotton an Unsettling Factor—Spot Buying Predominates

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 22 (Special)—Weakness in raw cotton values proved the unsettling factor in primary cotton goods markets during the last week, and prices on most constructions of plain goods declined an eighth to a quarter of a cent during a period of very light trading.

Expectations of another large cotton crop are being strengthened by continued reports of favorable weather over most of the cotton belt, and ideas of higher prices of cotton next fall began to lessen very rapidly.

The curtailment program undertaken by a certain portion of the mills North and South, and the absence of heavy accumulations of goods in distributing channels were the only constructive features in the situation, and it is felt in many quarters of the market that the current rate of production is still in excess of the movement of goods into consumptive lines.

Buyers are refusing to get excited about future supplies of goods, and will pay no attention to quotations for fabric deliverable in the early fall. They are confining present operations to very restricted covering of immediate needs only, taking little or nothing in staple plain goods that cannot be shipped inside of six weeks.

Declining Trend Prevails

Manufacturers see nothing ahead to put prices up, and those who have unsold stocks of goods on hand are beginning to think that goods sold now, even at a sacrifice from present market levels, will look well sold a month or two hence, if raw material values continue to slide. For that reason many have been disposed to let go whenever buyers made a firm bid.

Print cloth markets were decidedly dull and the total sales for the last week were very far from normal, in spite of the fact that prices were slashed an eighth to a quarter of a cent to close the trade in most instances. Standard 38½-inch 64x60s sold in a limited way at 7⅜c for spots, which is an eighth under the previous week's figure.

Forward goods went to 7¼c a yard, even those deliverable within a month. A small amount of goods were bought for July-August delivery, but practically nothing beyond.

On 6.25 yard 60x48s, there was some trading in spot goods, both first and second hands, at 6⅛@6¼c, and virtually nothing going in forward deliveries. The standard 80x80 goods, 4.00 yard, was very quiet, even at 10¼c for spots, an eighth off the previous figure, and 10½c for future contracts. Southern 4.25 yard 68x72s, offered freely at 8¼c, the most attractive figure in months, failed to arouse buying interest in any large way.

Price Cutting Ineffective

Low count constructions, with an eighth clipped off the quotations, showed an even larger percentage decline than the higher count numbers, but this did not stimulate interest in them, and only very limited quantities were taken.

Likewise the entire list of sheetings was marked off an eighth to a quarter of a cent, but goods sold in fractional amounts, and these practically all for quick delivery.

Fall River reported a very unsatisfactory week, with sales so light that few cared to estimate their total. And this was in spite of price cutting all along the line. Small lots of 36-inch low counts, which sold at rather firm prices, and a very modest volume of orders on carded sateens, also at lower prices, made up the week's total.

On fine goods made from combed yarns, the story was very much the same. Although prices were marked down in accordance with the movement of the entire cotton goods market, sales failed to reach respectable proportions. Buying of broadcloths, oxfords, madras and similar goods by shirt manufacturers went a good way to swell the week's total, but even this did not reach figures that would be called normal for this season.

Fine Goods Also Sluggish

Fine combed sateen moved in a very limited way, but marquisettes and similar drapery constructions were sought in a number of instances. Rayon alpacas were also being ordered in very fair volume, and in some instances were contracted for covering a considerable period ahead.

Hard twist voiles were wanted for quick delivery, and sold in a moderate way, though more business of this sort should have been done if the mills had the goods on hand. Pongees sold in a limited way, the plain goods orders being mostly for quick delivery, while lawns were moving moderately, but were very firm in price for spots.

Silk and cottons were inclined to be sluggish, with interest in single-end cantons centering in 88x52s, 35 inches wide, which changed hands at 14¼c and 14½c. The business on two-end cantons focussed on 35-inch 96x104s which went at 30½c in most cases. Tussahs were moving in a very moderate way at 21¼c for 80x56s and 33c for 96 squares.

Yarns were dull and uninteresting, and the little business that is available to spinners is of the coarser variety, so that the fine spinning plants are thrown more or less out of balance.

Curtailment throughout New England cotton manufacturing centers is being increased very rapidly and some of the mills have already dropped to a four-day schedule, with part of their plants shut down entirely. There is talk now of the possibility of a complete shutdown in some mills for a vacation of several weeks during the summer months.

COCHET AGAIN BEATS RICHARDS

French Star Eliminates American From the Singles at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, Eng., June 22 (AP)—Vincent Richards, the outstanding United States star in the Wimbledon lawn tennis tournament, was eliminated today by Henri Cochet of France, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4, 6—2. Richards also lost to Cochet in the recent hard court championship tournament at Paris. Richards won the toss for service, but lost the first game when, with the score at 30-40, he served a double fault. The American frequently netted Cochet's service, but won the second game. Richards improved his service to win the third. Cochet took the fourth. The Frenchman again broke through the American's service in the fifth, when Richards won only one point.

Cochet took the sixth and seventh, and Richards the eighth and ninth to win the set at 6—4.

The galleries were crowded. The majority of the spectators were non-partisan, cheering each contestant on his good plays.

Games Denied Eight Times

Cochet took the first game of the second set. Richards won the second after a spectacular rally. With both players at the net Cochet took the third. Both players began striving for placements. Cochet won his service in the fourth game with four placements to Richards' one. Cochet won the fifth and sixth. Richards fell in trying for the last point in the fifth game. Richards won his service to save the set, making him 2—5. He also won the eighth game, but the Frenchman rallied to win the ninth and the set at 6—3.

Cochet's game apparently is improving at every point. He took the first game of the third set. Richards won the next but began driving into the net on the third. Recovering when the score reached deuce, the American began to drive at sharp angles. Cochet adopted the same tactics. The game went to deuce eight times, Richards finally netted his return of a deep-court drive from Cochet, to lose the advantage, and Cochet won the game on a placement. The spectators acclaimed this game as the best likely to be seen at the tournament.

Richards quickly won the fourth. He also took the fifth, adopting a chop stroke. His service was poor in the sixth, the first ball seldom going in. Cochet seemed unwilling to go to the net after returning service, but won the sixth to tie the score at 3-all.

American's Backhand Strong

Cochet won the seventh when Richards netted four straight balls on the Frenchman's service. Richards won the eighth to make it 4-all. The American's powerful backhand saved him several times in the ninth, but Cochet finally took the game. The tenth game of the third set went to deuce thrice, Richards losing vantage on a placement and then losing the game and set by netting Cochet's deep drive.

Each took one game on service at the opening of the fourth set. Richards then changed his racquet, but Cochet won the third game despite the change. The young American player had 40 love on his service in the fourth game when the Frenchman fought the score back to deuce and then took the game on Richard's errors.

Cochet took the fifth game and Richards the sixth; but the American lost the seventh and eighth and with them the set and match. The last game went to deuce three times, and Richards began lobbing but could not make headway against Cochet's brilliant overhead volleying. The young American lost the next to the last point on a volley placement by Cochet from his deep court and then lost the match by serving a double fault.

Kinsey Beats Gilbert

Howard O. Kinsey of California, decisively defeated J. B. Gilbert, left-handed British player, 6—1, 6—1, 6—4.

The second day's play started under nearly as favorable weather conditions as the first. The air was a trifle cooler, with more breeze stirring, but there was not enough wind to bother the players. The day also lacked the royal pageantry of the opening, but the program promised some excellent tennis.

Kinsey took the first set from Gilbert at 6—1. Keeping to the baseline, the American found the far corners of the court with his drives, while his persistent chop strokes threw the Englishman into repeated errors.

Kinsey also took the second set at 6—1, the Britisher showing no improvement. Kinsey, if anything, was more accurate in this set, and went more frequently to the net for smashes or cross-court placements.

Gilbert braced in the third set and made several winning shots close to the lines. Kinsey was inclined to net more than usual and missed a number of his left-handed opponent's forceful drives. The Californian, speeded up after the game score had reached 4-all, and ran out the set.

Mlle. Lenglen Wins

Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen eliminated Miss Mary K. Browne, captain of the United States Wightman Cup team, from the women's singles, by a score of 6—2, 6—3. Miss Browne succeeded in taking four more games from the French star than in their final match in the international hard-court championships at Paris recently.

The two players received an ovation when they appeared arm in arm. The French star carried three racquets and a heavy coat sweater. She won the racquet toss for service, lost the first racquet toss for service, lost the first Browne's service was ineffective. The French girl took the second and third games with frequent placements. Miss Browne's service improved, but Mlle. Lenglen took the fourth, and then won her own service. Both were playing very ordinary tennis.

The American star drew the first heavy applause with a spectacular placement to win the sixth game. She seemed to tighten at this point and succeeded in winning the next. Then, in the eighth, with the score 30-all, she served a double fault and netted the final point to lose the set.

Miss Browne's corner placements seemed ineffective against Mlle. Lenglen's backhand stroke. Each took two games at the opening of the second set. Both adopted deep-court tactics, seemingly content to exchange long, hard drives, keeping the ball in play and waiting for the other to net.

Both Players Applauded

Mlle. Lenglen took the fifth and sixth. Miss Browne won the seventh and made the score 30-all on the eighth, only to lose that game through mistiming, the ball striking on the wood of her racquet. Mlle. Lenglen took the ninth game and the match.

Both were applauded on leaving the courts. They stopped a moment before a battery of cameras and then left together.

Miss Elizabeth M. Ryan, United States, defeated Mrs. Colegate of England, 6—0, 6—4. Miss Ryan at the outset had an easy time, taking the first set at love. She had to fight, however, for the second, in which the English woman led at 4—2. In this set Miss Ryan was netting with frequency and mistiming her smashes, while her opponent was doing some accurate placing.

Coming from behind, the American girl played in determined fashion and began finding the corners and passing her opponent at the net. She took four straight games to win.

Miss Betty Nuttall defeated Miss M. Elliott 6—4, 5—7, 6—2.

Miss Joan Fry defeated Mrs. Marshall, 6—1, 6—0.

H. C. Fisher defeated R. D. Watson, 7—5, 1—6, 7—5, 6—4. N. Sharpe defeated M. J. G. Ritchie, 6—3, 6—4, 4—6, 6—2.

M. Van Lennep of Holland defeated A. H. Gobert, 2—6, 7—5, 7—5, 8—6.

Mrs. M. Watson defeated Miss R. Watson, 6—0, 8—6.

P. D. B. Spence, defeated E. Petersen, 6—3, 2—6, 2—6, 6—2, 6—2.

LITTLE WORK ON THE HUDSON

Conditions of River Interfere With the Practice Planned by Coaches

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 22—Little hard work could be done yesterday by the college crews which are practicing on the Hudson River for the Intercollegiate Rowing Regatta, as conditions were against such work, a southwest wind roughing up the river.

Coach Robert Butler had the United States Naval Academy crew out both morning and afternoon. After a mile of difficult paddling in the morning the Navy coach ordered the men to put into the Cornell boat house, where they emptied the boat of water and stored it until afternoon.

Late in the evening the wind blew itself out and the Navy, as well as the other crews, were able to row a few miles on smoother water.

R. S. Callow and James A. Ten Eyck, Syracuse veteran, had their Washington and Syracuse crews on the water a full hour earlier than is the custom.

Columbia's three crews took advantage of the comparative calm of the cove north of Crum Elbow, but they too were forced back to the boathouse.

Wisconsin's eight started from the float, but Coach Vail ordered the men back to the boathouse and they did not row until evening. After a complete rest Sunday the men were ready and anxious for work.

The Pennsylvania varsity with Capt. D. K. Irmiger as the pacemaker started north in the evening and splashed through the waves as far as the Columbia boathouse, two miles away. They were forced to pull in to the Columbia float in a sinking condition. There was six inches of water in the shell when the oarsmen unshipped their sweeps. They had to leave their shell in care of Columbia and walk two miles down the railroad track to their own quarters.

Scottish Stars to Play at Fall River

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 22 (Special)—Samuel Mark and his co-owners of the Fall River Football Club apparently aim to retain the professional championship which Fall River has won three years in succession.

At an outlay of more than $7500 in bonuses alone, the club has signed five first-division Scottish League regulars among them John Caldwell, inside right and right halfback of Clydebank, Samuel Kennedy, center forward and David McEachran, outside left, of the same team, and William Hyslop, center halfback of Greenock Morton. The players are already on their way to the United States.

Alfred Brown, inside right of Greenock Morton will sail for America shortly to join Fall River. T. M. Martin, Fall River fullback, signed the quintet.

New Bedford has signed Samuel Chedzoy, former Everton star.

I. A. C. ENTERS 97 IN CENTRAL A. A. U. MEET

Special from Monitor Bureau

CHICAGO, June 22—More than 250 athletes have entered the twenty-second annual outdoor track and field championship games of the Central Association of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States, to be held at the Grant Park Soldiers' Field Stadium here Saturday, it is announced by C. A. Dean of the Illinois Athletic Club, chairman of the central track committee.

Again the big battle is to be staged by the Illinois Athletic Club and the Chicago Athletic Association, though many smaller clubs and unattached forces are nominating their best performers. The I. A. C. enters 97 candidates against 63 for the C. A. A.

Many former college athletes are to perform under club banners for the first time in this meet. Coach J. W. Behr of the I. A. C. has the biggest list of collegians, but Coach S. H. Darwent of the Cherry Circle has his share. Among those gained by the latter the most noted are H. R. Phelps, distance runner of University of Iowa, and T. C. Yarnall, dash runner of University of Illinois.

Coach Behr announces that W. A. Gruenhagen of University of Minnesota and K. R. Kennedy, 100-yard dashman and quarter-miler, respectively, have been enlisted by the Tri-Color, in addition to seven other outstanding athletes previously announced. G. P. Guthrie of Ohio State University, famous hurdler, will not be available to the I. A. C., however, until the national meet in July.

One club-to-club transfer is brought to light by the entry list. That is W. A. Dowding, famous broad jumper, who competed for the I. A. C. for several years. He has gone over to the C. A. C.

GOLDSMITH RECALLED

Harold Goldsmith, Boston National League Baseball Club's recruit pitcher obtained from Worcester last year and sent to Providence under option in March, has been recalled to help carry the Braves over a slump in pitching. Goldsmith has been performing in brilliant style for Providence, which is leading the Eastern League at present, and fans believe that he is about ready to take up major league duties with success. If he does, he will certainly be a welcome addition to the Boston club, which is getting almost everything in the way of progress except good, steady pitching.

DEY TO LEAD GREEN NINE

HANOVER, N. H., June 22—The members of the Dartmouth College baseball team elected Harrison S. Dey '27 of Washington, D. C., yesterday, to captain the Green nine during the 1927 season. He succeeds R. J. Michelini of Reading, Mass., who was kept almost wholly out of action this year. Dey plays first base and also captained his freshman team from that position. Last winter he was captain of the basketball team, playing center and forward.

MISS WILSON MEDAL WINNER

WILLIAMSVILLE, N. Y., June 22 (AP)—A strong wind swept the new Buffalo Country Club links yesterday as star women golfers from various sections of the United States and Canada contested in qualifying rounds of the club's sixth annual invitation tournament. Miss Virginia Wilson of Chicago led the field with a low medal score of 42, 41, 83. She refused to take higher than a 6 on any hole of the new course.

McMULLEN RECALLED

Over 100 Qualify for British Open

Four U. S. Amateur and Nine Professional Golfers to Try for the Title

ST. ANNES-ON-THE-SEA, Lancashire, Eng., June 22 (AP)—Professional and amateur golfers to the number of 117 are qualified to begin play here tomorrow in the annual British open golf tournament.

Four American amateurs and nine professionals will be pitted against the best players that Great Britain and the Continent can produce. The title will be defended by one of the Americans, James M. Barnes, professional, who won it last year.

R. T. Jones Jr. of Atlanta, Ga., who shot such brilliant golf—golf of a brand never before seen in the British Isles—in the qualifying rounds, has a great following who believe that he will give all the contestants a hard battle for the honors.

Walter C. Hagen, the only American-born golfer who has ever won the title—and he has captured it twice—also is well thought of by the experts after the thrilling match he won against Abe Mitchell last Saturday in one of his famous fighting rallies.

The American players eligible to compete for the open are: Amateurs, R. T. Jones Jr., George von Elm, Roland R. Mackenzie and Watts Gunn; professionals, Walter C. Hagen, Thomas D. Armour, Fred McLeod, A. A. Watrous, William Melhorn, J. M. Barnes, Joseph H. Kirkwood, Emmet French and Cyril Walker.

Most of those who have qualified were on the course yesterday and again this morning, getting into shape.

Jones, playing with Armour, von Elm and J. H. Taylor yesterday, showed some of the excellent golf he played in the qualifying rounds. Jones made the course in 68.

The other Americans who are eligible to play tomorrow, as well as the two Argentinians, Jose Jurado and Antonio Perez, had good practice rounds.

MID-WINTER POLO IN TEXAS IS PLANNED

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., June 16 (Special Correspondence)—Plans for the institution of an international mid-winter polo tournament here are being made by members of the Fort Brown Polo Club, and Monterrey, Mexico City, Matamoros, Kansas City, Detroit, Oklahoma City, Houston, San Antonio and several army posts have been asked to enter teams, and most of them are expected to do so.

One or two matches of the first tournament, to be held in January of next year, will be staged in Matamoros, across the Rio Grande from Brownsville, lending a true international aspect to the tournament. The play will last three weeks, with one match every day, and suitable trophies and awards are to be given.

The Fort Brown officers point out that the tournament here should attract many teams, as there are only two or three sections of the United States in which a mid-winter tournament will be favored with warm sunshine, as in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

ORANGE COUNTY POLO TEAM WINS FIRST, 9-8

MEADOWBROOK, L. I., June 22—In a closely contested polo game here, the Orange County team defeated Bryn Mawr by a score of 9 to 8 in the first game of the Meadowbrook Challenge Cup competition yesterday.

Thomas Hitchcock Jr., No. 2 for the winners, and George Earle 2d., No. 1 for Bryn Mawr, were the high scorers of the game with 6 and 4 goals respectively. W. A. Harriman at No. 3 was a power in the Orange County defense. One goal was credited to the winners when kicked in by one of its ponies. Games will continue today and Thursday. The summary:

ORANGE COUNTY	BRYN MAWR
No. 1—G. Moore	G. Earle 2d
No. 2—T. Hitchcock Jr.	B. J. Gatins
No. 3—W. A. Harriman	Morgan Belmont
Back—J. Milburn Jr.	B. McFadden

Score—Orange County 9, Bryn Mawr 8. Goals—Hitchcock 6, Moore, Harriman, pony, for Orange County; Earle 4, Gatins 2, Belmont, McFadden for Bryn Mawr. Time—Eight 7½-m. chukkers. Referee—Devereux Milburn.

MISS SHERWOOD OUT OF BRITISH TOURNEY

HARLECH, Wales, June 22 (AP)—The only United States representative in the British women's golf championship tournament withdrew today, when Miss Rosamond Sherwood of Boston defaulted to Mrs. G. R. Long.

The third-round matches included a contest between Mlle. Simone de la Chaume and Miss D. Hartwill, a strong Midland player. Miss Cecil Leitch had an easy time in this round, defeating Mrs. Lewis Smith, 8 and 7.

MARTIN AFTER NATIONAL HONORS

CHICAGO, June 22 (AP)—Alvin O. Martin, captain of Northwestern University track team, will enter the National A. A. U. meet at Philadelphia, wearing the colors of the Chicago Athletic Association. Martin made a record-breaking time in the half mile in the National Collegiate A. A. game, here, but a measurement of the track showed it to be short of the 880 yards.

CHAMPION WOLFF IS DEFENDING

Algonquin G. C. Scene of Trans-Mississippi Golf Tournament

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 22 (Special)—More than 200 golfers will play the second 18 holes of the qualifying rounds in the twenty-sixth annual Trans-Mississippi golf championship here today. The tournament is being held over the course of the Algonquin Golf Club, Webster Groves, Mo.

Clarence Wolff, St. Louis and the Sunset Hill Country Club, Sappington, Mo., the 1925 champion, is defending his title. Three former titleholders, Edward R. Held, James S. Manion and Stuart G. Stickney, all of St. Louis, are also participating in the play. Manion was the 1924 winner, while Held captured the championship in 1923. Stickney was the winner in 1913.

Among the players to qualify for the championship class yesterday there are five who appear to be certain contenders for the title. They are the former champions, Held and Manion, J. L. Dawson, the Chicago player; Joel Pappin, of Joplin, Mo., and E. S. Whitbread, of St. Louis.

Considering the scores of the first day of play yesterday it is predicted that the golfers who expect to qualify for the championship class of 32 must turn in scores of 155 or under for the 36 holes. The course is in excellent shape and with other good playing conditions a number of low scores are expected.

The best record in the qualifying round yesterday was that made by Held, who turned in a card of 67. On the first nine his score was 31, two above the record which he holds. He took 36 strokes for the second nine. Dawson and Whitbread each came in with 71 strokes, while Manion had a 72 and Pappin 73 for the 18 holes.

In the two-man team matches, the Algonquin Golf Club players took the lead after the first round had been completed. The Sunset Hill Country Club is leading in the four-man team matches. Both team matches will be finished today. The following players made qualifying scores of 77 and under:

E. R. Held, St. Louis	31	36	67
J. L. Dawson, Chicago	34	37	71
E. S. Whitbread, St. Louis	33	38	71

BOYS' FEDERATIONS PLAN CABLE MEET

Events to Be Held in New York City and London

NEW YORK, June 22—Arrangements have just been completed by cable between Charles A. Wrench, representing the Right Honorable Lord Desborough, K.C.V.O., the president of the Federation of London Working Boys' Clubs, and William E. Hall, of New York, for an international cable track meet, to be held simultaneously on Saturday, July 3rd, in New York City and London between the Metropolitan section of the Boys' Club Federation and the Federation of London Working Boys' Clubs.

The New York races will be run at McCombs Dam Athletic Park, 161st Street and Jerome Avenue, and the results exchanged by cable between the headquarters of the Boys' Club Federation in the Grand Central Terminal and the headquarters of the Federation of London Working Boys' Clubs in London.

The events to be run are the 100-yard dash, 440-yard dash, half-mile, one mile, medley relay (440 yards, 220 yards, 220 yards, 880 yards), running high jump and running broad jump. The contest will be subject to the regulations of the Amateur Athletic Association. Contestants must be under 18 years of age on April 1, 1926, and registered members of Boys' Clubs affiliated with the Boys' Club Federation located in the Metropolitan section which comprises New York City and the immediate vicinity.

An anonymous New York sportsman interested in boys' clubs has offered a handsome cup to be competed for, Medals will be awarded for first, second and third places.

OLYMPIC COMMITTEE IS FETED AT LISBON

LISBON, May 20 (Special Correspondence)—On their arrival here for a meeting upon which the eyes of the sporting world were focussed, the members of the International Olympic Committee were welcomed by the City of Lisbon and the reception at the Town Hall, presided over by the President of the Republic, was brilliant and enthusiastic.

The President of the Congress, the Premier and the members of the Cabinet, and representatives of Parliamentary and sporting circles were present and many speeches were made. Various festivities were arranged in honor of the visitors, among them athletic sports, in which all the institutes for physical education were to take part, and excursions were planned to Cintra, Estoril and other points of beauty.

Among the foreign representatives who were here were men of great prominence in connection with the Olympic Games, including Rev. R. S. de Courcy-Laffan, secretary-general of the Fourth Olympics in London; J. S. Edstrom, active collaborator at the Fifth Olympics at Stockholm; Count Baillet-Latour, president of the I. O. C. and chief organizer of the Seventh Olympics at Antwerp; Albert Glanda, Paul Rousseau and the Marquis de Polignac, organizers of the Eighth Olympics in Paris, and Captain Sharoo who is eagerly working for the success of the ninth revival in Amsterdam in 1928.

SECOND VARSITY ROWS TWO MILES

Is Timed in 10m. 3s.—Varsity Paddles Six Miles

RED TOP, Conn., June 22 (AP)—The Harvard second varsity crew in a time trial yesterday covered the two-mile course in 10m. 3s. The first mile was rowed in 4m. 55s. while the second was covered in 5m. 8s. The crew, rowing at a 32 stroke, was hampered by choppy water.

The varsity had two long paddles in the afternoon, covering six miles. The freshmen had a four-mile row and in the last quarter mile sent the boat over the water at a 38 stroke. The combination was scheduled to have a time trial, but because of the rough water this was postponed until today.

The men at the Harvard camp were discussing the times of the Yale and Harvard varsity crews last Saturday. The two went over the four-mile course within 15 minutes of each other, and the times reported showed a difference of only a few seconds.

Many members of the Harvard quarters were entertained at the submarine base yesterday. They were shown over the base and taken aboard the S-49.

PICK-UPS

THE St. Louis Cardinals are the only players to take a majority of their games against Pittsburgh to date. Cincinnati and Boston have even divisions of the series played against the champions; but the Cardinals had won five out of eight Monday. These two clubs are now engaged in a four-game series and it is one of the crucial ones of the season. If the Cardinals win this series they might as well be counted as much a contender for the pannant as Pittsburgh and possibly more so. As Hornsby states, his team is better in pitching then the champions and he figures his hitting is as good and his infield better.

"If a player has confidence he will make good," said Hornsby. "If he hasn't re wont, no matter how capable he happens to be at certain periods. Confidence makes championship teams, and we have it."

The St. Louis Cardinals are only one game and a half from the lead and only one game from second place. By next Monday, possibly sooner, fans may see Hornsby's club in the lead.

There used to be a time when if a player made home runs in consecutive games it would appear in headlines in the newspapers. Now he must make a home run in four or five consecutive games to get any honorable mention. Collins, Ruth, Lazerri and Gehrig have all hit home runs in consecutive games this season.

Lazerri is one player who has come up to the reputation which he made in the minor leagues last year as a home-run hitter. In seven games, including last Thursday's he hit four home runs, a performance that has received only casual mention.

The Yankees after going 12 games with only two home runs, started on another rampage and hit 18 in the last 14 games, including Friday's, a record that was only equaled when earlier in the season they hit 18 home runs in 13 games.

With 57 home runs to the Yankees' credit and the season nearly one-half completed, fans are expectantly looking forward to home-run records being broken. At the rate the team has gone to date it should acquire a total of 150 home runs for the season. The record is 124.

Jacobson's hitting run of a hit in 15 straight games was broken when he joined the Boston Red Sox and played Thursday. However, he managed to get a double in the game Friday, which was only a few feet shy of going over the fence. And Monday he hit a home run, a double and two singles.

CLEVELAND TAKES SECOND PLACE

CHICAGO, June 22—Cleveland took full possession of second place by defeating Chicago, here, yesterday, 5 to 2. The two clubs were in a tie for the position. Shaute kept the White Sox hits well scattered and also made three of his club's hits. Barrett fatured at the bat for the losers with a double and triple. The score:

Innings—	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R	H	E

RECRUIT'S HITTING WINS

DETROIT, June 22.—Although outhitting the heavy-hitting Detroit Tigers, St. Louis lost the opening game of the series, here, yesterday, 5 to 4, in 10 innings. Warner's hitting won the game. The recruit third baseman knocked in three runs and scored one himself, his hits including a double and triple. Miller and Zachary did their parts at bat to try to win for the Browns. Zachary, pitcher, made a double and two singles and Miller hit a home run and two singles. The defeat caused St. Louis to fall from sixth to seventh place in the league standing. The score:

Innings—	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	R	H	E
Detroit	0	1	0	2	0	1	0	0	0	1	5	9	1
St. Louis	0	0	0	3	0	1	0	0	0	0	4	10	1

RIGNEY'S ERROR PROVES COSTLY

PHILADELPHIA, June 22—An error by Rigney in the last half of the eleventh inning cost the Boston Red Sox a possible victory, here, yesterday, against the Athletics. The latter won by the score of 7 to 6, despite the fact that the losers outhit them, 17 hits to 12. Jacobson, Boston's new outfielder from St. Louis featured at bat with a home run, a double and two singles. Ehmke, former Red Sox pitcher, in the box for the first time for the Athletics, was knocked out by his former teammates in the fourth inning. Boston gained a lead of one run in its half of the eleventh inning, only to let the Athletics overcome it and finally win. The first Athletic up, Perkins, pinch hitter, doubled. Wambsganss ran for Perkins and scored when French, pinch hitter, singled. Foxx ran for French and was sacrificed to second. Cochrane singled, Foxx took third and scored on the next play, which was a pop fly to Rigney which he muffed, as poor an error as was ever made on the diamond. The score:

Innings—	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	R	H	E
Boston	0	1	0	4	0	0	0	0	0	1	—6	17	1

CORKRAN WINS MEDAL ROUND

PHILADELPHIA, June 22 (AP)—D. Clarke Corkran of the Huntingdon Valley Country Club won the qualifying round medal in the Lynnewood Hall Cup tournament today with a score of 149 for the 36 holes. Corkran, who is defending his possession of the famous trophy, kept within two strokes of par for a 74 in the morning and had a 75 in the afternoon, after a remarkable second nine of 34. Thomas J. Devine, Harrisburg, was second with 151, and Max R. Marston, former national champion, was third with 155.

CONNELL GOES TO MINORS

NEW YORK, June 22 (AP)—Joseph Connell, Villanova College outfielder, signed last week by the New York National League Baseball Club, has been released under option to Hartford of the Eastern League.

TIME TRIAL FOR COMBINED CREW

Yale Freshman Lineup at Present Is Announced

GALES FERRY, Conn., June 22 (AP)—The combination crew was the only one of the Yale boats to attempt speed work on the Thames yesterday afternoon. The combination was sent over the upper two miles of the four-mile course, rowing upstream. The time announced was 10m. 25s. A following wind made rowing conditions fast but rough.

The varsity went upstream in an endeavor to find calmer water to smooth out the individual irregularities. The junior varsity was given a workout and Coach Edwin O. Leader hopes to send the crew over the two-mile course in a time trial today. It will probably be the last of the Yale time trials for this year.

The lineup of the freshman crew as it rowed yesterday was: Bow, F. W. Morris; No. 2, Martin Fenton; No. 3, B. S. Cookman; No. 4, G. G. Schroeder; No. 5, H. H. Filliman; No. 6, Benjamin Brewster; No. 7, W. P. Jenkins; stroke, F. A. Drake; cox, G. H. Gilman. Of these, Jenkins, Fenton and Drake were members of the freshman 150-pound crew.

The list of officials for the regatta has been completed with the exception of the names of the Harvard University representatives. They are as follows: W. J. Meikleham, referee; Albert W. Putnam, assistant referee; Levering Tyson, finish judge; Frank D. Sankethal, assistant finish judge. All are former Columbia University rowing men.

Yale will be represented at the finish by S. W. Allen, chairman of the rowing committee, and the Eli timer will be A. M. Swayne. The Harvard judge and timer have not yet been selected.

REDS MAINTAIN LEAD

CINCINNATI, June 22—Cincinnati maintained its lead in the National League by defeating Chicago here, yesterday, 6 to 5, in 16 innings, the longest game of the present season to date. The contest was replete with good baseball and interesting points. In the ninth inning, Cincinnati came to bat two runs behind and tied the score. Again in the twelfth, the Reds scored two runs after the Cubs had made the same number in their half. The first six men in the Cincinnati batting order had at least two hits to the credit of each. Adams, Cubs' second baseman made two putouts and 10 assists without an error. The winners used four pitchers to the losers' two. The score:

Innings	1	2	3	4	8	9	12	16	R	H	E
Chicago	0	0	1	1	0	1	2	0	5	13	2

CHAMPIONS KEEP SECOND PLACE

PITTSBURGH, June 22—Pittsburgh and St. Louis engaged in a free-for-all hitting contest, here, yesterday, the champions finally coming out on the large end of a 13-to-11 score. Waner and Cuyler featured at the bat for Pittsburgh, and Hornsby and Blades did the same for St. Louis. Waner had a triple, double, and two singles in four times at bat. The Cardinals used six pitchers, a record for the season. Rhem who had won 10 games in 11 starts this season was knocked out of the box in the third inning. The Cardinals lost an opportunity of moving up a place in the league standing, for had they won they would have displaced Pittsburgh from second. The score:

Innings—	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R	H	E
St. Louis	1	4	0	2	2	0	0	1	1	11	14	2

From the viewpoint of most advertisers evening newspaper circulation is of more value than morning circulation. Hence, each new name added to the subscription list of The Ottawa Evening Citizen enhances the value of the good-will and assets of the publishing company. No such value attaches to subscriptions for The Morning Citizen. Therefore, the publishers cordially invite those readers of The Christian Science Monitor who wish to have an Ottawa paper delivered to their homes to subscribe for The Evening Citizen.

MORE BUSINESS

NO BUSINESS can expand with limited thoughts behind it—the people who need your goods must be told where the need can be supplied.

Advertising is the channel, but it must be done in the right way, by people who have made a thorough and complete study of it.

The Balance of Power in War

One might be accused of showing a lack of appreciation of the efforts of those who persist in arguing in support of the policy of maintaining national armament quotas at their present expensive standards were he to insist that the briefs filed by them are, in reality, convincing arguments in favor of ultimate disarmament. It must be agreed, of course, that complete disarmament can come only at some future period, as a realization of that world brotherhood which still is regarded as purely idealistic. But progress toward such a realization cannot be made while the belief persists that in superior force lies guaranty of national or individual safety.

It is humiliating that it should be deemed even possible to plead that twentieth century civilization can assure its own integrity only as it can be shielded and protected by overpowering armed forces. There was a time, conceivably, in those ages during which human thought was emerging from the chaos of superstition and fear which had so long engulfed it, when men with stone or metal weapons found it possible to dominate or intimidate those less formidably armed. The successes achieved by this method seem to have so thoroughly convinced succeeding generations of their effectiveness that throughout the centuries it has been supposed that civilization could neither be advanced nor the progress already made be preserved or safeguarded, except by increasing the firing range of civilization's weapons or adding to the depth of its armor plate.

Is it said that humanity can never progress beyond this point of only relative security? Must some nation of people possibly further advanced in the scale of civilization or culture, in order to maintain its prestige and its claimed supremacy, reserve to itself the privilege of arming itself with guns somewhat larger, ships somewhat swifter and airplanes somewhat more effective in warfare than those which less wealthy or less ingenious people are able to construct or purchase?

Perhaps such precautionary measures or considerations will, for some time to come, establish the degree of disarmament which prudent nations may deem it wise to fix. The time has not come, apparently, when it can be agreed that complete disarmament is possible. But it is impossible only because it seems difficult for those who are able to direct such matters as they see fit, to agree among themselves upon the adoption of such a policy. There is the constant striving to maintain a more or less fictitious balance of power in war. In other words, one nation, or one group of nations, insists that it should be permitted, by any general agreement arrived at, to preserve the advantage which has been gained through strategy, geographic or natural position, or by some claimed success in previous wars.

So long as this superiority complex, as it may be called, controls in diplomatic interchanges, whether these are held in Washington, or Versailles, or Geneva, or at The Hague, the approach will never be more than in the direction of disarmament. And just so long as it is believed necessary, or prudent, or advantageous to maintain ratios of armed strength, there will never be realized that complete freedom from fear, jealousy, and distrust which is the birthright of every free people.

It should not be said that it is impossible to relieve humanity of the entire burden imposed by the mesmerism of hatred and war. Such an emancipation is possible, despite the fact that those still bound are unable to glimpse it.

New Markets Developing

Economic recovery by the various nations of the world has been at times a rather slow process, and this has not infrequently resulted in political upheavals which have but added seeming distress to misery. It has been commonly said that the basic cause of such trouble has been the overexpansion of industry by war demand and the restriction of markets when that abnormal demand was withdrawn. So frequently has that explanation been given that the public has hardly had time to realize that conditions have largely righted themselves and that today industry has a new public to face and a new market to supply.

The changed conditions were easily recognizable in a recent report issued by the National Industrial Conference Board, which has just completed a survey of the population growth of the United States. It was said the population in America has increased 10,229,000 during the five years from 1920 to 1925. This increase represents a population 15 per cent more than that of Canada and 40 per cent more than that of Australia and New Zealand. It was estimated that the increase in gainfully employed population was approximately 3,965,000. Based upon the latest accepted calculation of average annual earnings per gainfully occupied person, the board figures that the increase in population represents an approximate increase in national purchasing power of more than $5,500,000,000 per annum.

This increase in population in the United States represents just that increase in the value of the markets within the borders of the country. The increase in earning power represents the increase in the amount of business that can be done within the United States. Actually, however, the increase is much larger, for as fast as the cost of living has declined the "real" earnings of gainfully employed persons have increased. The margin between income and the cost of necessities has increased, and that increase has left more to be spent in the open market. The consequent increase in the value of domestic markets has more than taken up the war slack in industry and placed American commerce upon a new and prosperous basis.

What has happened in the United States has undoubtedly been happening all over the world. The after-war distress has been largely removed through the operation of the usual law of increase. Where that law has been allowed to operate without violent interference, economic conditions have greatly improved. This is being manifested to no little extent in the United States. It is being recognized to a corresponding degree in most other countries. Where current obligations have been met and normal demands have been allowed to develop daily without interference, economic improvement has been rapid and sure.

Getting Better Acquainted

The city of Cleveland, O., recently devoted a special day to the celebration of uninterrupted friendship with Canada. The City Council set the day apart to be observed as "Canada-Cleveland Day." Thousands journeyed from Canada for the happy occasion, including leaders in municipal and provincial government. A Canadian kilted regiment marched through the streets to the skirl of the Scottish bagpipes, much to the entertainment of Cleveland's citizens. The Canadian ensign, with the Union Jack prominently displayed, flew alongside of the Stars and Stripes. Neighborliness and good fellowship ruled the day.

The Canadian response to Cleveland's hospitality will manifest itself in many beneficial ways. Millions of American tourists visit Canada every summer. They are assured of an equally hearty welcome. Although the Canadian people are perhaps less demonstrative, living farther north, they are genuinely friendly. They are comparatively small in numbers, but they have done some big things nationally. They are inclined to be less articulate, but some of Canada's great national achievements, like the service given on the transcontinental railways and the publicly owned hydroelectric power service in Ontario, speak for themselves.

The friendly exchange of visits between neighboring states and cities is surely one of the finest ways to get better acquainted. Ottawa, the capital of Canada, and one of the most beautifully situated of Canadian cities, is planning a centenary celebration for next August. It is only approaching sixty years since confederation of the provinces made Ottawa the Dominion capital. But the foundation of the town dates back to the coming of the Royal Engineers under Colonel By, in 1826, to build the Rideau Canal from the Ottawa River to Kingston on Lake Ontario. An invitation to visit Ottawa during the centenary celebration is being broadcast in the United States, as well as throughout Canada. Many will doubtless respond.

Philadelphia's great sesquicentennial is being talked of in Canada. Plans to visit the historical American city, where the inspiring message of liberty throughout the land went forth 150 years ago, are sure to be part of this summer's tourist itinerary for many Canadian visitors to the United States. Every year, thousands of American visitors attend the Toronto National Exhibition. Service clubs like Rotary and Kiwanis, and the great international organizations of human brotherhood, are constantly holding conventions and meetings, on one side or other of the imaginary boundary line, which are attended by leaders in Canadian and United States community life. So the people of North America are getting better acquainted, and the building of an enduring edifice of amity between nations goes steadily on.

Analyzing Installment Buying

Quite naturally, perhaps, those who are just now giving most serious thought to the growing practice of installment selling, or installment buying, are the responsible officials of large manufacturing and wholesaling concerns whose business it is to keep a weather eye out for possible financial squalls which will seriously affect their profit and loss accounts at the end of the fiscal year. A survey of sentiment among these credit managers, as reported by their national organization, indicates that they are somewhat apprehensive because of the opportunities being extended to consumers to mortgage their incomes too far into the future. They see this as the greatest possible danger point in this particular department of trade, though they find accompanying it a detrimental effect on social conditions and on general trade, a general laxity in accepting the credit of individuals, and the encouragement of the production of luxuries, thus lessening the production of goods of the non-luxury class.

It may be generally agreed, no doubt, that while the provisions made by which the actual or fancied needs of the consuming public may be supplied by recourse to the deferred-payment plan of purchase and sale, there is an increasing tendency, especially in the buying of luxuries, in the direction of overbuying. The difficulties encountered in overcoming this tendency are due to the inability of the wholesaler or jobber to direct, more than in an advisory capacity, the methods of distribution adopted by their customers. The retailer, so long as he can keep his credit good with the wholesaler and jobber, is at liberty to pass his wares on to whomever he sees fit. If his competitors find it possible to sell to those willing or able to pay only a small proportion of the purchase price on delivery, then he must adopt the same plan. The risk he assumes is shared, to some extent at least, by the concern from which he buys. It is to the advantage of both, and of all concerned for that matter, to see to it that the consumer does not assume a greater burden of debt than can be safely borne, and also that the period over which payments are to be extended is not too long.

But it seems that those willing to assume a speculative chance have gone beyond the point of safety in the volume of credit extended as well as in lengthening the period in which final payment must be made. This, if the volume of such transactions was small, would not be a serious matter. But it is found that the volume of these more or less questionable, if not actually unsound transactions is increasing. Those who have striven to be cautious are gradually being forced to adopt the selling methods followed by retailers who have not always been careful of their own credit. It is next to unavoidable that the result should be reflected in extravagant buying, and that the bulk of sales so made should be of commodities of the luxury class.

A readjustment of methods, in view of these facts seems inevitable. Abuse of credit or of privilege by the consumer is bound, sooner or later, to be followed by loss to the retailer and finally by loss to the manufacturer and jobber. The endless chain formed, like all other chains, is no stronger than its weakest link. In the end the consumer will suffer most, and the chief sufferer will be the consumer who has not abused his credit, but has made of the system a real convenience in supplying himself with those things actually needed.

The Modern Shop Window

More and more the shop window of today is coming into its own as a metropolitan asset and attraction. Without its potent charms the rigors and requirements of a city promenade would be a dreary test. It serves to soften the stern surroundings of stony pavements and walls with its gay and colorful tale of invention and progress, and it lifts thought out of the ordinary run of everyday things into worlds of fresh fancy and ardent adventure. In fact, window shopping has become a recognized pastime among city folk today, and in all probability this fact is the direct outcome of the growing taste and harmony displayed in the arrangement of modern window ensembles.

Out of the chaos of the old order of window display, where most everything in the shop but the cash register and the cat were crowded against the plate glass front, has come a highly specialized and altogether accredited form of craftsmanship known as window dressing. The clever young men and women engaged in this new kind of showmanship are recognized by the advanced shops and establishments of today as a very valuable asset, as directly responsible for establishing that subtle cachet and countersign so essential in capturing a desired clientele. Via the shop window the prospective client most often makes his mental reservations pro and con, and whether or not he or she passes within for further investigation depends largely on the good impressions established on the curb.

Perhaps the art of window dressing has reached a higher water mark on Fifth Avenue than anywhere else, not so much in the quality of the merchandise as in the skillful manner of presentation. Here the large New York establishments with their rows of huge plate glass fronts running up to one or two dozen in number have evolved settings and fixtures of remarkable beauty and dignity. Inspired by the Fifth Avenue Association, which yearly awards special prizes for the finest windows, and by the endless crowds of visitors from all parts of the world that throng this thoroughfare daily, the leading merchants spare no pains in creating window settings of immediate and enduring appeal.

Recently a large establishment on the Avenue, in celebrating its centennial, commissioned a celebrated French artist to create for its windows a series of silver screens which should evoke the various charms and conditions of fashionable Paris. Against these lovely backgrounds its staff of window designers set out in dazzling array the latest fineries from the French capital with such cleverness and charm that a new precedent was at once established. Also, in the matter of lighting—for the window shopping in New York is by no means confined to the daytime hours—the modern shop window has gone a long way, and the various exhibits take on an added charm under the softly diffused radiance in the evening. All the way from the exclusive slipper shops that display in paneled settings of polished splendor but a pair or two of their delicate creations at a time, to the popular two-priced stores with their indiscriminate masses of odds and ends in close-set formation, the plate glass parade is at attention, with something to fill the eye at every turn. By day and night the show goes on, free for all, and vastly entertaining. In its newer guise, the shop window of today has indeed become a thing of beauty as well as a strategic gesture of commercial importance.

Editorial Notes

It appears, according to an editorial in the Boston Herald, that the British Society of Inspectors of Weights and Measures is now enabled to exhibit instruments which, for delicacy of operation, outdo everything hitherto contributed toward the solution of their problem. A piece of writing paper, for instance, which had exactly balanced its counterpart was found to put on weight sufficiently to pull the pendulum considerably off the perpendicular when a signature of thirteen letters had been written upon it. The article then discussed the consequent "weight" of words, some 1,000,000 to the ounce, perhaps, the writer concluding with the comment, "Unless mind rather than matter were taken into account, of what famous author, orator or poet could it not be said, 'Thou art weighed in the balances and art found wanting'?" Truly, for we must remember that words have long been distinguished from the power behind them. Even Confucius left this sagacious counsel:

> For one word a man is often deemed to be wise, and for one word he is often deemed to be foolish. We ought to be careful indeed what we say.

Not very long ago an editorial was published in the Pacific Dental Gazette, later to appear in pamphlet form and be widely circulated by a large dental cream concern under the somewhat formidable title of "Bacillus Acidophilus in Dental Caries." It deals with the report of R. W. Bunting and Faith Parmerlee, presented at a meeting of the American Dental Association as a result of their investigations into this subject. The article contained some startling statements. For instance:

> A brief experience with acidophilus as it occurs in the mouth is sufficient to show the ease with which it may, in stained preparation, and even in culture on blood serum, be mistaken for the diphtheria bacillus or for organisms of the Hoffman type. Many slides defy a microscopic separation.

Into the Beni Yenni

I went into the empty café and found a gaunt, sack-covered Arab there. He bowed his hawk face and said, "The mules for M'su dame," and led us, staff in hand, to the animals. Then through the thronging, clouding Arabs of the market place to one Nezar Said, sitting on the curb with his chin on his bare knees. This Nezar Said got up and silently took charge of us.

We left the main road, and descending out of the white fog which chambered the Fort, took the path for Taourirt Amokrane. We passed below this village in half an hour. It was a gray coping of stone huts knobbing the hill, with a rag of cloud caught on the escarpment below it, and a white mosque standing at the highest point.

This was the capital of the Beni Yenni villages, which chimney the spurs of the Kabyle Mountains, in northern Algeria.

We were high on our saddles of cowhide. They were covered by red and yellow saddle bags. Nezar Said strode behind, tented in his burnous. The sunlight at first faintly penetrated the thinning mist. Then it burst roundly out of it into a warming blue sky, and lit the colors of the steep spurs and of the backs of the hills.

We passed these steeps patterned with short emerald corn, cactus scribbled, and the bare, lilac bark of the fig branches. We passed the red-turned earth, dug by hand, and shining. These declivities were darkly bearded by olives, and whitened by curded cherry blossom and almond. We jogged down and down the rocky mule track, round the waists of the olive-tarnished hills.

Like gulls tipped on green and luminous waves, the villages of the Beni Yenni flashed white on the flooding, reluctant tide of Kabyle ranges. They broke and poured down rain-green ledges to the long ravine which split the land before us. The hills shone aqueously, in green, and iron, and indigo, and violet, like a rolling sea.

Beyond them the clouds banked and boiled in glassy cumulus, rain blackened, and dark as Homer's "wine dark sea." It was a turbulent, cloudy barrier of noiseless storm. Shapes and cloud spume broke upon it. Cloud surf spun out in vaporous trajectories. Huge masses of cloud slid down like ochreous snow in the thaw, and iron continents of vapor moved on askance.

As we faced this barrier of tremendous vapors the sun gloriously struck them. An immense cornice of cloud broke away and was torn down from a great height in the wall, and there were revealed to us, and to Nezar Said, the flash of the high facets of the Djujura peaks.

"The Djujura. They are far away. Ah, oui!" said Nezar Said, with weary melancholy. There was a cragged, brief chain of peaks, sharp as black diamonds, peaks of violet ice. They flashed full light as from the windows of a mighty transept. These mountains were half-hidden cathedrals of ice, slate and felspar; remote and snow-lit aisles. They stood there adamant, cloud slung, the capsizing thaw of vapor obscuring but never obliterating their cold altitudes.

We ascended to the ravine by a cord of stony track. We passed little processions of four or five Arabs jerking on donkeys up the steep spur to the Fort. Suddenly, round a corner and silently, these Kabylie men would come. Such top-heavy creatures with tawny, wide, gnome-like brows, and solemn eyes, their lean, bare legs poking out and wagging on either side of their beasts, almost touching the ground. It was like meeting a procession of nodding dwarfs in robes and turbans. Some walked, with their yellow cotton breeches ballooning between their legs.

"Right!" Nezar Said would shout in Arabic as we met these processions, and the mule would give way to let them pass. As the leader came up he would look at us with unbetraying solemnity and say, "B'jour, M'su dame." We gave and received at least twoscore "B'jours" as we went down to the ravine. "Right! Right!" would come Nezar Said's voice.

Nezar Said was a dark, tragic-eyed Kabyle, with a leathery dome of a forehead, lined as with staves for tired music. His voice was in one high tone. We never knew what he really felt or thought; his face betrayed nothing. He treated us obediently as disembodied nonentities, and for five or six miles of olive hot hills and river beds we could get nothing but a resigned, "Ah, oui," from him. He booted it through this regrettable world with the completest indifference.

As we mounted the tide of hills we overtook a strange trio: a figure clothed in white like a shroud from head to foot mounted on a mule and escorted by two handsome, vividly dressed young men, armed with rifles. They were ahead of us in silence, but signaled to us to pass them on the track. As we passed we saw the white figure was a woman. She wore a black veil, covering her face entirely, and thus was led over the wet hills. This sight loosened Nezar Said's tongue, once we were out of earshot of the trio. We led him into a tired discussion on western and eastern customs.

"That is the wife of the man with the turban," he said. "She has been visiting her parents, who are of the Beni Yenni. Her husband has come to take her back to his home, which is on those hills. He is a rich man. It is strange. Ah, oui."

"But why is he armed?" we asked.

"Ah, oui," said Nezar Said, "that is his wife."

We were now stepping along a ridge in a bowl of dark green spurs and sappy valleys, walled by ochreous sandstone mountains. The bowl, twenty miles of it, split by the profound, olive-bearded ravine, swilled into blue and indigo waves of distance, to where the capsized clouds floating low were bleached by the sun.

We passed a gang of women in red and yellow silk; and their ears, necks, arms and ankles weighted with black silver jewelry set with red coral. These women were heavy, dark creatures, stooping about, sidling along like gorillas—one felt. They had gloom-pooled eyes.

And well might they stoop and sway, for on their backs were slung split crags and bowlders of rock hewn from a quarry, which they were lugging down for the wall of a cherry orchard. Those who had dropped their load below came up and sat on a log and watched us pass; a meaningless stare in their oil-black, troubled eyes at first and, from one or two of them, crackling falsetto laughter.

"Ah, oui. They are the unmarried women. They must work, for they have no husbands," said Nezar Said, taking things as they were in this regrettable world. We persisted till we got to know a little about education and justice in the region. Justice, it became evident, was his sore point.

"Ah, oui. Since we are civilized, there is no more justice," said Nezar Said. "Before we were civilized, the mountains were infested with bandits and the roads were bad. I myself have been robbed on these very hills. But there was justice.

"Ah, oui. Now there are no bandits and there are good roads. But if you have a dispute you have to go to the Fort, and there are interpreters and officials; and justice is to him who can pass a bit round"—making a significant rubbing together of thumb and fingers. "Since there are interpreters there is no more justice."

"Dreadful," we said. "Then you must be against being civilized?"

"Ah, no," said Nezar Said. "When one lives among civilized people, it is better to be civilized. They are very 'malin,' the civilized people. Ah, oui!"

And he sadly shook his head, implying that it was the only way to keep pace with them!

But a longer acquaintance with Nazar Said, and what he told us in the mill where we sheltered from the threatened rain, convinced us there was another side to that story.

The World's Great Capitals: The Week in Paris

PARIS

Unemployment, it has long been known, is practically unknown in France, but the latest statistics will doubtless cause some surprise. Only 409 people, of whom twenty-two are women, are drawing unemployment benefit in France; ninety-five of them are in Paris. This is out of a population of nearly 40,000,000 people. The figures could hardly be less, for they represent the narrowest margin of temporary and accidental unemployment. They are certainly the lowest registered since the war. In 1921, when there was a slump in trade, there were 91,225 persons without work, but in 1922 the number had already fallen to 10,071, and in 1923 to the almost negligible number of 2674. In 1924 the out-of-works were further reduced to 1227, while last year they were 705. In spite of financial difficulties, therefore, France is in a somewhat enviable position. The contrast with England, whose finances are flourishing, is striking. The latest figures available show that there the number of unemployed is 1,612,700, which does not include the victims of industrial disputes.

The taxi drivers in Paris belong to many different nationalities. A fair proportion of them are Russian exiles. Others from central European countries can scarcely speak French. Many of them, doubtless to the satisfaction of American and British visitors, understand English. So great is the number of taxicabs now driven by foreigners that the French chauffeurs are taking steps to have a distinguishing sign placed on their vehicles. The Société des Chauffeurs Français, which has 12,000 members, has designed a badge to be affixed to the windscreen. It is oval in shape and its colors red, white and blue, and it bears the inscription, "Chauffeur Français." This badge is to be issued to any Frenchman who holds a license to drive a taxicab.

So frequently of recent years have the postage fees changed owing to the fluctuations of the franc that the quantity of correspondence insufficiently stamped has grown enormously. Probably the majority of persons who neglect to affix the necessary number of stamps are merely ignorant of the existing regulations. The authorities have decided that something must be done to call their attention to the facts, and announce that in future all inadequately prepared correspondence for foreign countries which is marked with the sender's name and address will be returned so that the deficiency can be made good. There have been complaints from chambers of commerce in foreign countries whose members have been irritated by the receipt of understamped letters. The new rule will have the inconvenience of causing delay, but perhaps it will provide a salutary lesson. On the other hand, letters which have not the sender's name and address on the envelope will be forwarded as usual, whether properly prepaid or not.

Dress parades are, of course, a feature of Paris life, and have become elaborate social affairs. But for the first time a shoe parade has been held on the same lines as the dressmakers' shows. On a recent occasion about 100 "creations" were displayed. It is not astonishing that this innovation is that of an American girl, Mary Bendelari, and is one more sign of the extraordinary American invasion of France. It appears that there is a difference between French and American feet—that the average Frenchwoman has a wide and short foot, while the American has usually a long and narrow foot. This difference was specially noted at the first shoe parade in Paris.

Senator Menier, who is the "chocolate king" of France, has just sold Anticosti Island, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, for 180,000,000 francs. He bought the island in 1892 mainly as a gigantic game preserve. It covers 3120 square miles and forms part of the Province of Quebec. The Dominion Government maintains control of signal stations and lighthouses on the island, for it is on the route of ocean-going steamers, besides having a strategic importance. The purchasers are the Wayagamack Pulp & Paper Company.

In France, at any rate, the stage is infested by amateurs who often having private means are willing to work for practically no pay and for whatever glory their career may bring them. The professional actors feel themselves to be seriously menaced, and the Theatrical Artistes' Union has therefore adopted a proposal by which nobody shall be ranked as an actor or an actress unless he or she has obtained a license from the union and has become a member of the union. An apprenticeship of three years is demanded. There is no wish to place obstacles in the way of genuine aspirants, but it is held that they should undergo a period of probation and should then join the professional ranks. Theaters which decline to recognize the license or frequently engage amateurs will be boycotted. It remains to be seen whether the trade union system can properly be applied to the stage, where in the long run talent alone should count.

One of the most entertaining books of memoirs that have been published in recent years is that of Louis Andrieux, who was formerly the dean of the deputies. He has witnessed no fewer than three revolutions. Particularly did he participate in the events which hastened the fall of Napoleon III and the foundation of the Third Republic. Among his contemporaries of whom he writes were Guizot, Thiers, Victor Hugo, François Vincent Raspail. He has served his country in many rôles. As a lawyer he was appointed procurateur and then was elected deputy. Afterward he became prefect of police, and a few years later was sent as an ambassador to Madrid. He was the oldest member of Parliament when he retired a few years ago, and has since devoted himself to retracing the events of his long public career. Even if he has not figured as prominently in the public eye as Georges Clemenceau, his record is scarcely less interesting.

Few Intoxicated People Seen in New York

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

Now that Independence Day is drawing near, I am reminded of an impressive sight I witnessed in Staunton, Ill., on July 4, 1925.

A celebration of vast proportions had been planned, and prominent speakers invited. About 12,000 persons had assembled, including many from surrounding towns and villages. In that large crowd, composed of all classes of people who work in the mines, I observed only one individual who appeared to be slightly intoxicated.

I asked the friend I was visiting how such excellent and orderly results had been obtained, and she replied: "Why, it is our Mayor. He is determined that the law shall be enforced in Staunton, and this is the result. To do this, a gang of bootleggers has been practically wiped out."

It was a joy to note the interest, especially among those of the foreign element, in Senator McKinley's speech against war and in behalf of the unity of nations.

I wish to add that in living on Washington Square, New York, for the past year, I have observed very few intoxicated persons, although thousands of people of all nationalities are seen here during the week. I agree with "Pussyfoot" Johnson, who says, "Compared to the old days, New York is like a Sunday school."
